Woe to Whiskey's Friends
The Banker "in" Silk
Muscle Shoals for Ford
Also Competition

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921, by Star Company.

An able, earnest young business man asked yesterday, "Why don't you write editorials denouncing those that supply poisonous whiskey to young people." Only the man with money can get spirits now, but there is much drunkenness among young people, and men of means are largely responsible for it. The law is made contemptible by those that should set a good example. De men of mature years realize that ridiculing one law makes other laws contemptible? When they flout the prohibition law before the young the latter may conclude that laws protecting property are also silly.

It is curious that clergymen preach so few sermons on breaking the law lightly. Whiskey poison is responsible for crime and immorality. There is an excellent text, promising woe to him through whom evil comes. It might be usefully aimed at the prosperous business man who thinks it "funny" and ingenious to break the law and encourage whiskey drinking among the young. Such a man would despise any one forcing opium upon the Chinese, struggling against it. It is just as bad to make a joke of whiskey and lawbreaking in this country.

Henry M. Butzel and Levy Mayer, bloodhounds of the law, discussed terseness. "In these days of worry," said Butzel, "our clients are terser than we are. A silk man appealed to his banker, almost weeping: 'The silk business is terrible. You must let me have more money.' The banker replied: 'Not a dollar, you are into us too deep already.' 'Were you ever in the silk business?' the silk man asked. 'Never,' replied the banker. 'Well, you're in it now. Good-bye.'" Bankers will see the point. Many are in a dozen businesses and they WISH THEY WERE NOT.

Deep spots are in Henry Ford despite his apparent lack of guile. He wanted Muscle Shoals, but made known that nothing would induce him to touch the thing. The interests, big and wise, made sure that Ford would not bid, then made their usual offers! "The government must supply the capital; must guarantee against loss." The bidders would pay a dollar down and a dollar a year. "Muscle Shoals is not a going concern, it is a favor to take it for nothing," etc.

Then up steps Ford and makes his bid. He will pay on hundred millions in real money, agree never to take more than 8 per cent. profit, will use the plant to make cheap fertilizer for farmers, supply cheap power to manufacturers, and, incidentally, demonstrate the value of natural resources.

The government does not like Ford, and bankers do not like him. But to reject Ford's offer would be cheating the public, the farmers and the government, and Ford undoubtedly will get his chance to do useful work on a big new scale.

Ford may be wild in his financial theories, that would put Kilowatts, or units of human energy, in place of good old gold, yellow and gold, scorned by the young and loved by the old. He has ruined his political chances and his hope for the presidency permanently by unwise, unjust, un-American attacks on the Jews. But when it comes to business don't mix him up with Parsifal.

Here is more Ford news. He is to have competition. F. L. Klingensmith, until lately vice-president and treasurer of the Ford company is making a car to undersell Ford. He starts a production of 25,000 cars. Ford could make them in one week. Klingensmith says he can beat Ford by more than a dollar per hour in cost of overhead, etc., because of industrial conditions. He will sell within $25 of Ford's price now, and undersell him next year. The difficulty is to tell what Ford's price is. Two or three years ago Ford showed this man a light eight-cylinder engine, never yet used, saying: "If I want to and have to, I can put that engine in a car to go 50 miles an hour to sell for $250. And if you have trouble you can go to a service station, have your engine taken out and a new one put in by paying $26."

Ford will smile at competition, probably, but Goliath laughed out loud at David. For particulars ask Klingensmith, No. 1406 Kresge Building, Detroit.

James Swinhart, of the Detroit News, wise young man, says the American Telegraph & Telephone Company can tell you all about any American city, how fast and in what direction it is growing, what the population will be ten years hence. More than ten years ago that company announced that in 1921 Detroit's population would be over a million. It came within 40,000 of the exact census figures. Fifteen years hence, in 1936, according to the A. T. & T., Detroit's population will be 2,500,000. Good time to buy lots.

This is interesting, and how do you explain it psychologically? Colored people use the telephone more than all other races. In the house of a colored citizen the telephone leads a busy life, and colored subscribers are highly valued. Is it that they are more social than others—more willing to spend, less willing to walk? The A. T. T. does not know, but guarantees the main fact.

Lewis Guns Used in Irish Riots

MANY FALL IN BELFAST BATTLE

Report Dail Eireann Secret Ballot on Treaty to Avoid Acrimony in Public

Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 17 (By the Associated Press).—Fierce firing broke out in the Newtownards road section of East Belfast this morning. The firing was so intense that tram car service was suspended. Lewis guns were used against the rioters by the Crown forces. An employe of the city tram service was shot dead and at least six persons are known to have been wounded.

In the Ballymacarret district two persons were shot, William Proudfit, fifty-nine years old, being wounded in the abdomen and his son in the leg. Another young man was attacked by a crowd and badly beaten.

By International News Service.

Dublin, Dec. 17.—From a trustworthy source it was learned today that a secret vote would be taken upon the Irish peace treaty by Dail Eireann this afternoon.

It was said that the decision to vote secretly was based upon a desire to avoid acrimony in the open session that will be held on Monday.

Followers of Michael Collins, commander-in-chief of the Irish republican army, and Arthur Griffith, founder of Sinn Fein, said they were confident that the pact would be ratified.

Whether or not Eamon De Valera has succeeded in forcing any amendments upon Dail Eireann was not known.

It was believed, however, that in view of the fact that the British Parliament approved the treaty in its

Rain tonight, and rain or snow with falling temperatures Sunday, is the official forecast today. Winds will be strong, shifting from south to west and northwest. The coldest in Boston today was thirty-two at 1 a. m., and the mercury rose steadily from that point.

Ledoux alleged that the treaty covers territory taken by force and that it is illegal under common law.

BROTHER OF BOSTON MAN INDICTED

Three Counts of Conspiracy and Extortion Charged; Bill Also Against Pearse

Attorney Leo Corcoran, brother of former District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County, who has fled to Mexico, was indicted today on three charges of conspiracy and making threats to extort money.

Theodore Pearse, said to be an investigator in the office of the Corcorans, was indicted on three similar charges.

These bills were returned by the Suffolk County Grand Jury and reported to Judge Wait in Superior Court.

It was at the same time rumored that the grand jury would later report other and equally sensational true bills.

The indictment of Leo Corcoran, a prominent lawyer, was largely unexpected. His name had not been formally mentioned in the so-called "blackmail investigation" before.

The bills were returned as a result of the labors of Assistant Attorneys General Hurwitz and Goldman.

Corcoran, it was learned, is charged with having threatened James L. Donovan, Boston merchant; one Curtis, Kenneth Merrill and Max Korn, all in different cases and on different dates.

It is charged that the club he used was the threat of charging them with statutory offences.

The alleged threats against Donovan were made in June, 1919, and those against Curtis in May of the same year.

Besides the two indictments charging conspiracy, there is one charging "threats to extort money."

Corcoran and Pearse, represented by William Jennings Patron, pleaded not guilty. They were given leave to withdraw this appeal and substitute a special plea in bar with a ten days.

Both furnished bail in $2,500, Corcoran's being furnished by Dan Sheer.

Beside these conspiracy and extortion indictments, the Grand Jury returned a true bill against Morris Goldman of Chelsea, charging him with larceny, conspiracy, receiving of stolen goods and being an accessory to larceny. This case involves the alleged theft of $2,400 from a Chelsea woman by fraud.

CAMBRIDGE POLICE SEEK BIG "PEEPING BURGLAR"

Cambridge police are seeking a big unidentified man who was surprised while looking into a window of the home of Mrs. Rose Schlesinger, No. 26 Upton road, Cambridge. It is thought that he went back to the house expecting to find the occupants either asleep or away and had planned to rob the house.

HUB MAN DEFENDS WOMAN

United Fruit Co. Head Emphatically Denies Slightest Impropriety With Her

"Of course, mine is a situation unfortunate for any one to be placed in. But I can assure you as man to man that there never was the slightest impropriety in my associations with Mrs. Penfield.

"It is true I did register under an assumed name at the Hotel Lafayette, in Washington, in October, 1920, and Mrs. Penfield did call upon me there. But she wished merely to consult me in my capacity as a lawyer about a matter that I am barred from discussing because of the ethics of my profession."

The speaker was Eugene W. Ong, Boston millionaire and general counsel and vice-president of the $100,000,000 United Fruit Company. He was discussing with a New York friend the situation in which he found himself following the "raid" upon his legal apartment by Walter Scott Penfield, noted international lawyer and formerly Washington counsel for the Fruit Company.

TELLS OF "JEALOUSY."

In his discussion with his New York friend, himself a distinguished man, Ong admitted frankly that Penfield had made charges involving Ong and Mrs. Penfield. The substance of this talk was repeated by Ong's friend as follows:

"Mr. Penfield was in a mad state of jealousy. This is why he tried Mrs. Penfield and myself with these terrible things. Why, he even went to the home of my father, former Judge Walter Ong, in Pasadena, California, and repeated his charges.

"He asserted I had made a studied

4 OFFICIALS READY TO GIVE UP JOBS

Parke Sends Letter of Retirement to Curley; Others to Act Soon

Four city officials have either resigned or are preparing to resign as the result of the Boston city election last Tuesday, when James M. Curley was elected mayor.

They are City Collector E. W. H. Parke, City Treasurer Frank S. Deland, Health Commissioner W. C. Woodward and Commissioner of Public Buildings Herbert Wilson.

This is the first sign of the general upheaval among the office holders of the Peters' administration, which has been expected since the result of Tuesday's election became known.

Announcement today that City Collector Parke had mailed his letter of resignation to Curley, asking that it take effect as soon as the proper audit on his accounts in office be completed, was the first ground swell of the tidal wave that is expected to sweep into political oblivion for a time at least, many faces long familiar about the City Hall.

Immediately on the heels of the announcement of Parke's action came the news that City Treasurer Frank S. Deland had taken similar steps, and that his letter would go to Curley either today or Monday.

Shortly after this announcement

COURT RECORDS SHOW THE GROWTH OF DRUG EVIL

By BERT FORD.

Growth of the "dope" scourge is reflected in a measure in the records of various police courts in Greater Boston. But the court figures give only a mild indication of the real scope of the traffic. Few runners, peddlars or addicts are caught.

Figures compiled by Assistant Bert Hudson at the direction of Clerk Edward J. Lord of Central Municipal Court in Boston show marked increase since 1918.

Beginning in July, 1919, the criminal docket lists six dope cases for the month; in August, twelve; in September, eight; in October, nine; November, eight; December, twenty-three.

The "dope" cases in the same court in 1920, per month, follow: January, 13; February, 7; March, 43; April, 25;

Commissioners Deny Murphy Request for After Christmas Postponement

The recount of votes cast at the city election last Tuesday will start in Faneuil Hall at 9.30 Monday morning despite efforts on the part of representatives of John R. Murphy to have the work postponed until after Christmas.

The decision was reached today after a hearing before the election commissioners on the petitions filed by Mayor-elect James M. Curley and his closest opponent, in the election, John R. Murphy.

Joseph Lundy, counsel for Curley during the campaign, who has filed a formal petition with the commission protesting the entire Mayoralty vote cast in city wards 3, 4, 5 and 6, explained today that the vote was merely a move to protect the interests of Health Commissioner W. C. Woodwardward and Commissioner of Public Buildings Herbert Wilson announced that they also would tender their resignations to the incoming mayor, so as to clean the slate.

It was expected that more than 100 positions will be directly at the disposal of the new Mayor when he takes office February 4. Most of them will range from $1,200 a year to $9,000 a year.

In addition to these, Curley will control the appointments of several hundred other employes of the city for the next four years.

One of the choicest plums at the disposal of the new Mayor will be that of Corporation Counsel, and the name of Joseph C. Pelletier, now district attorney of Suffolk County, has been linked with that appointment. This position pays a $9,000 annual salary.

MILK IS SOLD AT 11 CENTS IN ROXBURY

One Cent Below Cost, Say Dealers, Who Expect to Attract Purchasers

Several stores in Roxbury reported today that they were selling milk at [illegible] cents a quart.

This is one cent below cost, according to [illegible] operators, who say that the regular wholesale price is 12 cents a quart to the creamery.

This cheap milk, they explained, serves as a feeder to the store, by bringing in customers who might not otherwise. A heavy demand for the milk is reported.

Sugar is delivered along with other groceries.

No reduction in prices by the larger dealers is expected before January 1. This became known when a statement was issued by the secretary of the New England Milk Producers' Association, stating that the association has refused to grant any price concessions to the Boston dealers.

The price committee of the association was expected to continue in session to discuss a possible reduction after January 1.

"The producers are deeply concerned that milk should be available to the consuming public at the lowest possible price," says the statement, "but will not be influenced in its decision by the desire of any dealer for cheaper milk with which to undersell his competitors.

"We have no voice in fixing or charge dealers make for milk. We are vitally interested that the price to the farmer shall be sufficient to enable him to continue his milk production."

FEAR LOST LAWRENCE GIRL IS A SUICIDE

Lawrence, Dec. 17.—The police are searching for Alice Seaforowitz, aged nineteen years, of 37 Concord street, who has been missing from home for a week. Fear is entertained that the young woman has committed suicide by drowning in the North Canal or Merrimack River. She had been despondent, it is said, because of being lame.

Joseph Seaforowitz, brother of the young woman, told the police that when he was leaving home on December 8 his sister said: "Goodbye, you won't see me again." Miss Seaforowitz is five feet five inches tall, weighs 145 pounds, has dark hair and brown eyes. She wore a black plush coat, gray striped dress and a black hat.

175 CASES OF LIQUOR STOLEN IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Dec. 17.—An inventory of the stock of liquors stored by the government at the People's Warehouse shows that at least 175 cases of bottled in bond whiskey, valued at $17,500, instead of between fifty and seventy-five cases, as was at first reported was stolen from the warehouse Monday, December 5. The thieves, two masked men, held the manager of the warehouse up and forced him to show them the compartment in which the liquor was stored. Then they broke the lock and carried the liquor away in a truck.

CONFESSES 100 AUTO THEFTS, SAY POLICE

Alston Man Arrested in Pittsfield for Having Stolen Everett Car

Raymond White of Alston, arrested in Pittsfield on a charge of having stolen an auto belonging to M. S. Elsner of Everett, and wanted in Plattsburgh, N. Y., on a similar charge, has broken down, according to the police, and told an amazing tale implicating himself in the thefts of more than one hundred automobiles within two years.

The local authorities have been able to substantiate much of his story.

The man is alleged to have declared he has operated in many of the cities in Eastern Massachusetts, as well as Pittsfield and other western State cities and towns, as well as in New York State.

White is alleged to have worked in company with a man known as Herbert W. J. Fitzgerald of Dorchester, who is being held in $3,000 bail, which he has been unable to furnish.

The police believe he was the ring leader of a gang of auto thieves who three months ago attacked and seriously injured Metropolitan Police Officer James Murray at Somerville.

Four members of the gang were arrested and are now serving a prison term. White is said to have been the only one who escaped.

Of the 10,381,309 negroes enumerated in the last census, there were 9,572 for whom no State of birth was reported. The proportion of southern born negroes who migrated to the North or West, according to the report, was only about one-fourth larger than the proportion of those born in the latter region who migrated to the South.

GERMANY'S PLEA FOR EXTENSION SPURNED

Allied Reparations Commission Refuses to Consider Debt Request

Paris, Dec. 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Allied Reparation Commission has refused to consider Germany's request for an extension of time on her January and February reparation payments until the German government tells just what she can pay on these instalments and gives other information demanded. This developed when the text of the commission's note to the German government was made public here today.

The text of the note reads:

"The Reparation Commission has received a letter from the Chancellor, dated December 14, announcing that the German government was unable to pay in their entirety the instalments due, under the schedule of payments on January 15 and February 15 next, and requesting the Reparations Commission to extend the time limit of these instalments.

"The commission can but express its surprise that the Chancellor's letter contains no definite statement as to the currencies which the German government will be able to pay on each of the above dates; as to the length of the extension requested for the payment of the balance, or as to the security to be offered meantime.

"Unless and until the commission receives definite information on these points it will be impossible to give consideration to, or even examine, the protest of the German government.

"The reparations commission regrets to note that the Chancellor's letter makes no allusion to the measures he has adopted or proposes to adopt in compliance with the views expressed by the commission in its verbal statement of November 13 and its letter of Dec. 2, 1921. The commission recommends this letter to the particular attention of the Chancellor."

PLAN PROTEST ON HIGH FREIGHT RATES

A statement protesting the failure of the Interstate Commerce Commission to make the 10 per cent. freight reduction on agricultural products apply on New England railroads will be drafted and sent to the commission by representatives of farm bureaus and other agricultural organizations in all of the New England States. This action was decided on after a meeting of these representatives in the State House. Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, commissioner of agriculture for Massachusetts, will join in the protest.

WOMAN TOLD OF REVELS AT KINGSTON

Mrs. Law, Kept in Seclusion by Police, Reported to Have Exposed Events at Inn

Plymouth, Dec. 17.—Wild revels at the Kingston Inn a short time before Edward C. Cardinal was shot to death in a garage were reported to features of the inquest being held in his death.

Mrs. Law was recently identified as a member of a gay party at the inn on the Saturday night preceding the murder. Richard J. Rowland, one of the defendants, is said to have been at this party with her. Certain hidden conversations at the party and the death of Cardinal may be established through her story, it is believed.

WOMAN IS GUARDED.

Mrs. Law has been so rigorously excluded from contact with counsel for the defence and with newspapermen that the belief is growing that she may have knowledge bearing directly on the murder. The manicurist and former movie actress is closely guarded by officials on her trips to and from the courthouse, where the inquest is being held.

Counsel for the three men charged with the murder today protested at further delay in the trial of the case when their clients were brought before Judge Davis in the Plymouth Court. After spirited remarks by the trio of lawyers, the case, however, again went over, this time until December 28.

GOVERNMENT NOT READY.

Assistant District Attorney William A. Kane informed the court that the government was not ready to proceed.

John P. Vahey, attorney for James W. Wickham of Duxbury, insisted, as he had done at a previous session a week ago, that his client was ready to face trial at once.

"All they want my client for is as a witness," said Attorney Vahey with vehemence. "I don't see why he is held in jail without bail."

"I think he is wanted for more than that," interposed Judge Davis in the John Harmish of Hingham, said he "had assumed the case would be continued."

There was a crowd in court which overflowed into the hallways. Scores of other persons gathered outside the courthouse, and many from time to time peered into the courtroom, which is on the first floor.

The three defendants were brought into court by Turnkey Fred Finney of the Plymouth Jail.

SEARCH FOR AUTO.

Miss Myra Keene, eighteen-year-old waitress who was brought to the inquest as a witness. She is said to have heard shots on the night of the shooting, and to be able to fix almost exactly the hour of the murder.

Walter Dudley, chef at the Kingston Inn, also heard the shots, and he told what he knows of the events on the night Cardinal was shot. Ina Cahoon, waitress, will appear Monday when the inquest will be resumed.

A search is being made for an automobile which is said to have been in the garage at one time prior to the murder, and which disappeared after the crime. It is thought possible that this may have been the car in which Harmish and Cardinal brought the whiskey to the inn.

A trio of Boston sporting men have appeared as a result of the inquest, the nature of their testimony has not been given out. It is assumed how crap games were also conducted in the Inn as a headquarters.

Others who remain to testify are Thomas Cardinal, brother, and John W. Burke, owner of the Inn leased by Rowland. Cunniff is ill and Burke cannot be found.

250 FILIPINOS ARE KILLED BY TIDAL WAVE

Manila, P. Thousands of head of livestock were drowned, and the rice crop over a large region virtually destroyed. Fifty-two residents of Bajuy are reported to be in hospital suffering and drowned. The property loss in Capis is estimated at $2,000,000.

attempt to win the affections of his wife. He instanced automobile trips—one to Rhode Island. He asserted I had used my Summer home in Swampscott, Massachusetts, in my attempts. All of these statements are false. Often Mrs. Ong and Mr. and Mrs. Penfield accompanied me on automobile trips. This was true on the Rhode Island trip. Mrs. Ang knew all about my friendship for the Penfields and in fact counted them among her friends.

"VICTIM OF MAD JEALOUSY."

"Why didn't Penfield make these charges openly and legally? He was in Reno when Mrs. Penfield instituted suit for divorce. He could have subscribed to an affidavit in that action had he so willed.

"I assure you I am the victim of a man madly jealous, insanely jealous of a beautiful, chaste young wife."

The American's story created a sensation in many parts of the country, especially in Boston, where Ong's father-in-law, Andrew W. Preston, is honorable head of the United Fruit Company, is a financial and social power in Washington, where Penfield is practicing law, and where he and his former wife were recognized social leaders in New York, where both families are well known, and in Omaha, the home of Mrs. E. N. Bacon, mother of Mrs. Penfield.

Following the granting of her final decree of divorce in Reno on July 24 last, Mrs. Penfield and her nineteen months-old daughter, Virginia, went to the home of her mother. They departed a fortnight ago on an Eastern trip, and a week ago visited in Washington.

ENGAGEMENT RUMORED

Mrs. Penfield passed a day or two also in New York. She told friends she intended to spend the Winter in Florida. A dispatch last night from Omaha said it was rumored there the latter had allied Lucia Bacon is engaged to a wealthy New Yorker.

Mrs. Penfield went to Reno for the purpose of establishing residence last January. This was more than two months after the dramatic occurrence at the Hotel Lafayette and some six weeks after the meeting in a New York hotel at which were present all four principal actors in the tragedy, Mr. and Mrs. Ong and Mr. and Mrs. Penfield, when Penfield shook his fist in Ong's face and demanded that he free himself and marry Mrs. Penfield.

Ong not only refused to do this, it understood, but would not make provision for Mrs. Penfield. Her father was a man of wealth and substance. He was killed in an automobile accident two years ago, and his estate, it is said, is modest.

DESERTION CASE.

In the Reno proceedings, the attorneys were Brown and Belford for Mrs. Penfield, and Bonney, Price, Downer and Hawkins for Penfield. It was a typical desertion case, the lawyers said, and the only witnesses were called to establish residence. No defence was presented.

Ong was in New York on business on Thursday. He started that afternoon for Boston.

The story of the Penfield charges has been known for months in shipping circles. Practically every officer and employe of the United Fruit Company had an inkling of the affair. The details, however, were unknown until published yesterday.

FILIPINO NATIONALISTS CALL FOR FREEDOM

Manila, P. I., Dec. 17 (By the Associated Press).—Absolute independence for the Philippines through complete severance of political relations with the United States, is declared to be the platform of the Nationalist party. The platform favors a change in the name of the election department in order the personal supervision of the commissioners themselves. Both Curley and Murphy will be represented at the recount.

Attorney Lundy will appear for Curley and Murphy will be represented by Charles H. Morris, his law partner. Francis J. Brennan, former member of the street commission will head the Curley watchers.

REQUEST DENIED.

Morris pleaded with the commissioners for a recount ward by ward instead of twelve wards at a time, but Chairman M. C. Burke of the commission declared such a move would merely waste time, and would take at least twenty days to accomplish the result. The request was denied.

The commissioners also overruled a request from Morris that the count be postponed until after Christmas.

"This is an important public duty and one that permits of no delay," declared Burke, who added that the counting would be continued from 9:30 in the morning until 6 each day until the work is done.

PAPER THROWN OUT.

The commission carefully checked over the petition papers filed by both candidates. The Murphy paper from Ward 8, Back Bay, roused the ire of the Curley watchers, who fancied they saw similarity in the handwriting in a number of the signatures, but was allowed by the commissioners.

The paper filed by Joseph A. Maggiard, recent surveyor of the port, and one of Murphy's campaign managers, from Precinct 1, Ward 18, was thrown out by the commission as a number of the signatures were blurred.

Curley in the unforeseen event that the recount should give the election to Murphy.

If the recount fails to affect the result of the election, the petition will be dropped.

ILLEGAL VOTING.

Lundy today again declared his belief and that of Curley that there was illegal voting in all of these wards.

The commissioners decided that the recounting of the ballots would be made twelve wards at a time by one of the election department up before Chairman Burke. Both Curley and Murphy will be represented at the recount.

Attorney Lundy will appear for Curley and Murphy will be represented by Charles H. Morris, his law partner. Francis J. Brennan, former member of the street commission will head the Curley watchers.

London Believes Irish Treaty Is Gaining

London, Dec. 7 (By the Associated Press).—With ratification of the Irish Peace Treaty completed in the Imperial Parliament, all eyes were turned today on Dublin, where the Dail Eireann continued its deliberations.

The consensus of opinion of the Irish correspondents of the morning newspapers is that yesterday's discussions in the Dail added strength to the supporters of the treaty, although it is recognized that the opposition continues to be formidable.

Some writers see confirmation of the opinion that the treaty adherents are winning in the fact that the statement issued in Dublin, calling for a public session of the Dail on Monday, was signed by both Eamon De Valera and Arthur Griffith, instead of by De Valera alone, as such announcements have been signed heretofore.

They think that this circumstance implies that Griffith's following in the Dail now considerably outnumbers De Valera's.

TWO CONCERTS TO HELP VETS HAVE CHRISTMAS

Two concerts, proceeds from which will go to buy Christmas dinners for needy war veterans will be given in the National Theatre, Tremont and Berkeley streets, tomorrow, under the auspices of the Ex-Servicemen's Welfare Bureau. The theatre is donated to the organization for the occasion, as are the services of the performers.

An attractive bill has been arranged, including Hugh McDonald, the Irish piper; Miss Eileen Shannon, pianist; Miss Babe Evelyn Olcott, soprano; Martin McGuire, boy soprano of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York; Miss Beatrice Phinny, harpist; and Emmett Moore, Irish tenor.

200 HANGED AND CLUBBED, SAYS WATSON

Georgia Senator Declares He Has Proof for Investigating Committee's Record

Washington, Dec. 17.—Senator Watson, Democrat, of Georgia, announced today that he would insert in the record of the next meeting of the Senate Committee investigating his charges that American soldiers were illegally killed in France, a letter charging that over 200 soldiers were illegally hanged or clubbed to death by officers and never reported in France.

"I will offer this and similar letters by eyewitnesses, directly disproving the statement of the War Department that only eleven soldiers were hanged in France," announced Watson.

"I will offer a letter from one man who was the eyewitness to four hangings at Gievres, where the War Department says only one man was hanged."

Watson produced a letter from Atlas G. Burlington, of Kentucky, but who said his home was Detroit, Mich.

"How much an untruth as that only eleven American soldiers were hanged in France could be handed out to the American people, I do not understand," said Burlington, who then added his charge of over 200 soldiers being hanged or clubbed to death.

"I am going to tell you what occurred before my own eyes. Some of it was not intended for me to see, but I managed to see it," he continues.

"There was a boy named Radliff, from Mobile, Ala., whom I saw every day for two months. One evening at supper he refused a meal, said a bad can of meat was part of his supper and threw it away.

"An American and a French officer told him to pick it up and eat it. He refused and struck one of the officers. The boy was hanged that night with two others—all white—on the gallows at Gievres. He was reported missing."

Burlington, in the letter, told of the clubbing of a boy named James from El Paso, Texas, by an officer, while on the firing line.

"I have another letter," said Senator Watson, "from a man at present in the navy and stationed at Charleston, S. C. I will ask the committee to call him as a witness. The man was with the 313th Supply Company, Q. M. C., and was stationed at Gievres.

"He gives a description of the hanging of several soldiers, which he witnessed, and which has the characteristics of being an illegal affair."

"Gallows" an Unloading Crane, Says Engineer

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 17.—William Lucas, an engineer who served as a major of engineers in the American Expeditionary Forces, in a statement today said he had recognized a picture of a "gallows" furnished to Senator Thomas E. Watson in support of the latter's charges of wholesale executions in the A. E. F., as the kind of construction used while in France.

"We had to have some means of unloading steel tanks from cars," said Mr. Cowles. "I constructed this beam, by means of which the tanks were lifted from the cars by a rope and deposited on a platform. I recognized the picture at once when I saw it in the paper, which called it a 'gallows.'"

The Judge Advocate-General said there were eleven hangings in France, and I think that it will be found that that was all.

"I was president of a court-martial over there, and I want to say that I would confine the army entirely with such a tribunal than a civil court of justice."

PROVIDENCE THIEVES GET $2,566 IN GEMS

Providence, Dec. 17.—Thieves entered the home of Gilbreth Brown, No. 15 Audubon avenue, during the absence of the family and stole jewelry valued at $2,566. Entrance was gained by forcing a cellar window and then by forcing a door leading from the cellar to the kitchen. The house was thoroughly ransacked. A partial list of the articles taken was a wrist watch valued at $450, a ring set with a turquoise, surrounded by 12 small diamonds valued at $1,950, and a platinum guard ring set with sapphires valued at $200.

WEYMOUTH WANTS BAN ON BOATING LIFTED

Residents of Weymouth have appealed to Representative Luce at Washington to remove the ban on boating on the Weymouth Back River. The river was closed to the public five years ago at the outbreak of the war, and residents and property owners have been unable to pass through the drawbridge properly at the naval ammunition depot. John Henry Bay of East Weymouth is leading the fight.

HULL'S "LOVERS' LANE" IS STILL IN DARK

The oldest "lovers' lane" in the United States remains unlighted, although several other streets in the town of Hull have obtained street lights during the past year. The famous little roadway, over which some of Boston's most influential businessmen strolled years ago, retains its old, colonial landmarks, despite the advance of civilization.

FRENCH GIRL PUGILIST LANDS WITH CHALLENGE TO OWN SEX IN U. S.

W L L N G TO FIGHT KILBANE

By Universal Service.

New York, Dec. 17.—America, attention! "Pugs" front and centre. Johnny Kilbane step out and prepare for war with the great "white hope" of the fair sex of Europe.

Jeanne La Mar of Paris is here with blood in her eye looking for battle. No one in Europe will fight her, so she has decided to vent her ire on the ring champs of arid America.

Right now she is out gunning for Johnny Kilbane. Whether she has been attracted by the unmarred beauty of the Cleveland champ or because he is small in stature as ring stars go, is not known, but the fact remains that she travelled 3,500 miles across the Atlantic and is determined to knock America for its first goal through our Jawn.

"You know I think I shall have a hard time convincing the United States that I am a fighter," Mlle. La Mar declared upon her arrival, in a mixture of French and English. Mlle. Susanne Lenglen made such a favorable showing in the tennis championship matches with Mrs. Molla Mallory—and poor Georges Carpentier. In the moving pictures I know how se grand and noble Monsieur Dempsey stretched him out in four rounds, and now I feel that America will not take the French seriously in sports.

COMES "TO REDEEM" FRANCE.

"But I have come to redeem my country, France, and I will fight any woman boxer in your country regardless of weight. I am but a feather-weight, weighing 125 pounds," she continued, "but in Europe I have fought heavier opponents and defeated them with such ease that I am able to procure a match with Kilbane. And here is where Johnny Kilbane comes in.

"As though doubting the finic capabilities of American women, Mlle. La Mar declared:

"If no woman in America will accept my challenge, then I will fight the nearest champion you have to my weight, Johnny Kilbane, providing Monsieur Kilbane will 'pull' his punches. That is, he must not hit me too hard. Then I shall fight your great, your glorious Kilbane."

Then a flash of worry crossed the fair features of the French champette.

"Your commissioners—do you believe they will grant me a license to fight? Of course I must have a license to meet Kilbane. In France the dignified commissioners presented me with such privileges, and being no opponents I was unable to use them."

LOOKS LIKE SHOW BEAUTY.

Attired neatly in the ultra-French styles of the Paris boulevards one might hardly believe the little French woman is a pugilist. She looks more like a star member of Flo Ziefeld's beauty chorus, with a mile a stick into the river and it sank. Thinking that was a good place to put it out of harm's way he threw in the other forty-eight sticks, a stick at a time.

Grady went away, but the sticks rose to the surface and were discovered by the police a few minutes before the arrival of a hundred schoolboys.

Walter L. Wedger, the State's explosives expert, today reported the dynamite was in pretty good condition except for being water-soaked. Grady is a good man and ordinarily careful, "but he deserves reprimanding and Mills Lenglen by fighting M. Kilbane the American women ignore my challenge."

NURSE ACCEPTS CITY POSITION AT $1,200

Margaret M. Ryan of No. 780 Huntington avenue, appointed by Mayor Peters as a nurse in the health department, was the only one of the entire list of eligibles who was willing to accept the position, it has been learned. The appointment carries a salary of $1,200 per year for the first six months with a raise to $1,300 thereafter at the discretion of Miss Ryan's superiors.

BOSTON STAGE STAR WILL WED ON MONDAY

Miss Gulesian is the daughter of M. H. Gulesian, owner of the St. James Theatre. She went on the professional stage in 1915, appearing with William Hodge in "The Man From Home." She will become the bride of James L. Beck

MISS MARGARET A. GULESIAN

Mr. and Mrs. Gulesian of No. 859 Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, today announced the coming marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Alice Gulesian, and James Linus Beck, next Monday evening at the Gulesian home.

The wedding ceremony will be followed by a formal reception after which the young couple will leave on a honeymoon trip.

Miss Gulesian, who is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, dramatic department, went on the professional stage in 1915, and made a distinct success as "Ethel" in "The Man From Home," produced by Carle Stowe at the Majestic Theatre that year.

Mr. Gulesian, father of the bride-to-be, is well known in Boston business circles and is owner of the St. James Theatre.

DYNAMITE CAST INTO RIVER BY BEVERLY MAN

Contractor Explains That He Believed 49 Sticks Would Not Explode

Another dynamite mystery is solved. The forty-nine sticks found in the Bass River, Beverly, near the base of the East River drawbridge, were dumped there by James L. Grady, a Beverly contractor.

Grady said he thought the dynamite was useless. He tried to explode it, but it wouldn't explode. He threw a stick into the river and it sank. Thinking that was a good place to put it out of harm's way he threw in the other forty-eight sticks, a stick at a time.

Grady went away, but the sticks rose to the surface and were discovered by the police a few minutes before the arrival of a hundred schoolboys.

Walter L. Wedger, the State's explosives expert, today reported the dynamite was in pretty good condition except for being water-soaked. Grady is a good man and ordinarily careful, "but he deserves reprimanding and ought to be publicly shamed," Wedger said in a report today to Colonel Alfred F. Foote, the State Commissioner of Public Safety.

One of them found more than thirty quail feeding with his hens this morning, and another reports six partridges roosting on his democrat wagon under a shed.

ADMITS GUILT IN WALL STREET EXPLOSION

Man Seized in Poland Tells Details of Plot Against Life of Morgan

Warsaw, Dec. 17 (By the Associated Press).—Plots and counter-plots, reading like a chapter from fiction, were involved in the search for clews in many parts of Europe by American secret service agents which resulted in the arrest here yesterday of Wolfe Lindenfeld, alias William Linde, in connection with the Wall street bomb explosion in New York in September, 1920.

Lindenfeld has fully confessed, the authorities say, naming the ringleader in the plot, which he declared was aimed at J. P. Morgan, the infernal machine exploding prematurely.

According to Silvester Cosgrove and Paul Altendorf, who trailed Lindenfeld, the suspect has named five principals in the plot, now in Europe, who received $20,000 from the Moscow Third Internationals through New York communists.

Lindenfeld has declared his willingness to return to New York as soon as possible and turn State's evidence. The Polish authorities say? he was exposed in 1919 as a Russian secret agent and fled to America at that time, returning to Europe last Spring.

Altendorf came to Europe last February and Lindenfeld in March. During the Summer Altendorf, living in various communistic centres, obtained a clew which led him to seek Lindenfeld's acquaintance.

As a result, Cosgrove arrived in Warsaw two months ago, posing as having connections with Communist groups in America, and was introduced to Lindenfeld by Altendorf. Cosgrove later suggested to Lindenfeld a scheme whereby, by giving information in regard to the Wall street explosion, he could receive a large share of the rewards offered for the arrest of the plotters, without risk to himself.

THREE-MASTER ASHORE OFF ISLEFORD, ME.

Southwest Harbor, Me., Dec. 17.—The three-masted schooner Priscilla Alden went ashore during a snow squall today near the coast guard station at Isleford, but later was floated and headed for here. She was headed with plaster rock.

GIRL HELPS TO CAPTURE BOLD CONVICT

Berwin Back in Cell After 7 Hours' Freedom; Caught Breaking Into House

Convict Harry Berwin is back in the Charlestown Prison after enjoying seven hours of liberty which followed his sensational escape from the institution in an empty packing case.

He was captured when Miss Josepha Ireland of Newton Centre discovered him forcing an entrance into a neighbor's house on Eastbourne road.

Berwin made his escape at about 10 o'clock yesterday morning, hiding in a box that was taken from the yard of the prison to the Boston & Albany freight yards, and escaping from the box when the truck stopped down town.

He was arrested shortly after sunset in the cellar of the home of Leslie O. Crane of No. 9 Eastbourne road, Newton Centre, and returned to the prison.

Miss Ireland lives in a house on Ward street, closely adjoining the Crane residence, which is closed for the Winter during Crane's absence in Florida. She was seated in the sewing room, she said, when she saw a man crouching in the shrubbery beside the Crane home.

GIRL CALLS POLICE.

As she looked the man sprang from the shrubbery, leaped across the lawn and made for the cellar entrance. Watching him intently, she saw him break open the door and descend into the basement of the house.

Miss Ireland instantly called the police. Officers Hannan, Burke and Jaquin were at once sent to the spot. Entering the darkened cellar, they found Berwin standing at the top of the cellar stairs, trying to break open, with a poker, the locked door that leads up into the house.

The escaped convict submitted to arrest quietly. He was taken to the police station for examination. There he said that his name was Frank Smith. He admitted having escaped from the Charlestown prison, but denied that he was Berwin, who was at that moment being sought by officers in every city in Eastern Massachusetts.

GRINS AT WARDEN.

The police officers, uncertain whether or not they had Berwin or some other ex-convict, telephoned to Warden Shattuck at the prison, and he sent Assistant Deputy Superintendent Prescott and Prison Officers Loring and Humphrey to Newton. Arriving at the station the officers identified Berwin.

Handcuffed to Hogsett, with the other officers at his side, Berwin soon passed through the gate into the prison enclosure. He did not seem depressed and greeted Warden Shattuck with a cheerful grin. He had no money, and he told the warden that he had had no supper. Shattuck promised him a meal as soon as they arrived.

Berwin was sent at once to his cell, to be quizzed today on the methods of his escape. Warden Shattuck declared that he is of the opinion Berwin made his escape without assistance. It is believed the convict prepared the box Thursday, knowing that it was to be taken from the prison on Friday, and that he stole a pair of trousers from the clothing department.

Berwin, in all probability, will not be punished at the prison for his escape. Warden Shattuck's custom is simply to have an escaped convict, who is caught, brought before the Superior Court for sentence on charges of jail breaking. Berwin will doubtless appear in the court in a few days.

At the time of his escape Berwin was serving a sentence of from seven to nine years for breaking into the home of Jay Benton of Belmont, who was then assistant attorney-general of Massachusetts. He entered the prison in 1919 after sentence in the East Cambridge Court.

Police say that he has an extensive prison record, and has had to have served sentences in Pennsylvania and to have escaped from jail in Newark, N. J., shortly before committing the break in the Belmont home.

He was known in the prison in Charlestown, however, as a model prisoner and blacksmith's helper. His quiet, sleepy, unambitious air he was never suspected of harboring any designs regards an escape.

MUTE BEATEN AND ROBBED BY CAMBRIDGE BANDITS

Michael Doran, deaf and dumb, of East Brookfield, who has been visiting friends in Cambridge, reported to the Cambridge police in writing his story on a pad of paper that he was held up, beaten and robbed on Harvey street, in that city. Doran said two men held him while the third pushed the muzzle of a revolver against him. He was thrown to the ground when he began to resist, and was kicked and pummeled. The robbers took $33 and left Doran on the sidewalk.

Cambridge Mother Trained Mount Holyoke's Most Perfect Girl

Physical and Mental Prowess Result of Sane Philosophy of Education.

By HAZEL CANNING.

If you want to bring up your daughter to be the perfect girl, physically — why then, don't neglect her mind.

If you want your daughter to play baseball and hockey, just like a boy, with deep breathing and ruddy health —why, encourage her to develop her intellect, as well as her muscles.

PROVIDE THE TRAINING.

If you want your daughter to be an all-round, "sound mind in a sound body," sane outlook from a sane intellect sort of young woman of 1921, why, then, provide her with the training which leads thereto. Don't nag her to the gymnasium, don't preach the obvious, suggest, if you must, and always leave a little something to the good sense of your daughter, young Miss America.

This is the doctrine of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Miles, which has produced Mount Holyoke's most perfect girl of 1921—Miss Alice L. Miles, of Cambridge. Now Miss Miles, as a Mount Holyoke senior, has been adjudged the best developed girl, physically, in her class. For she has won the Sarah L. Streeter Cup, given the college for the girl in the senior class, who is found to be in the best condition, at the time of her final physical examination.

The honor fall, this year, to a young woman of Greater Boston, and the young-woman's mother tells how to bring up your girl to be just as healthy as her daughter.

DON'T EXALT THE PHYSICAL.

"In the first place," says Mrs. Miles, "don't exalt the physical too much. Give it its proper place and no more. Remember the girl has a mind, too, and a precious soul, worth cultivation. Of course, Dr. Miles and I are very pleased that our daughter has been found to be so well off, physically; but if she were not giving a good account of herself in her studies, we would not prize the physical award so much.

"Certainly the first aim of parents should be to turn out well-developed, well-conditioned boys and girls. Our youngsters have only one life to lead, and the way they decide high moral matters, the way they write their books or carve their statutes, or build their bridges, or teach school, or attend colleges later on in life, it will depend on the way their health was started by their mother, at home and in school, years before."

ONE LIFE TO LIVE.

"'You've only one life to live,' I always told my girls, 'therefore live it well, and look out for your health.' And I helped them, in a way I wish every mother could, or would, by taking the entire care of them myself, when they were little.

"They grew like a girl, now, worrying her parents, with her silly bobbed hair and exaggerated short skirts, who might be a source of comfort to them instead, if she had been started on the right road to health, and her mind filled, very early, with the fitting ambitions of young womanhood, in regard to exercise and diet, and proper, girlish sports."

To speak in very kindly and a very efficient American mother. Now just see how her daughter has gone out from home, and, in her world of the college, done ample credit to mother's philosophy of education. In the beginning she won the Streeter cup, as already mentioned. This gone with a record as an all-round girl athlete.

Miss Miles is also on her class teams in indoor basketball, in baseball, field hockey and track, of which last she is the captain. There's the physical.

WON MENTAL PRIZE.

In her studies and in her social life, this little Cambridge girl rounds out her mother's doctrine. For Miss Miles is president of the Chemistry Club, she is house chairman of the largest hall on the campus, is a member of the Ukelele Club, and has taken her part in dramatics and debating. And, when she comes home to mother, these Christmas holidays, she will bring, as a "mental" prize, to go side by side with the physical, the Shaw-Williston award, which is given Mount Holyoke students, on whom are conferred honors for excellence in the work of the first three semesters.

She's an all-round athlete, excels in her studies, and is popular in social life.

MISS ALICE L. MILES.

NAVAL CLAIMS OF FRANCE AND ITALY HEARD

Return of Foch Expected to Influence French Attitude on Conference

Washington, Dec. 17 (By the Associated Press).—The naval committee of fifteen of the arms conference resumed consideration today of the French and Italian naval ratio problem, but with little prospect that the day would show any material results in the way of advancement toward an agreement among the five powers on relative naval strength.

The committee again was entrenched behind its rule of silence, and no further information was available as to the exact nature of the statement the French group is making as to France's needs in naval tonnage on the basis of her national security. Nor was further light available on the French project to build ten $3,000-ton capital ships in the decade 1925-35.

Some officials here count upon the effect in France of the return of Marshal Foch from the United States to put a halt to what they call the ordinary warmth of the reception the great French soldier received all over the United States during his visit here. It is estimated by these officials that the Marshal's report on the very friendly feeling shown toward him by the American people everywhere will have a bearing in final determination of the French government to shape its course in naval matters, along the same lines as Great Britain. The United States and Japan have agreed to do in the three power naval understanding.

NILAND SAYS GRAND JURY REFUSED TO HEAR HIM

Former Representative Thomas A. Niland of East Boston today protested that the Grand Jury of Suffolk County has refused to allow him to present evidence of alleged bribery and corruption in connection with the passage of the Elevated public-control bill.

Niland said that after weeks of delay he was yesterday advised by the foreman of the jury to present himself at the Grand Jury session at 10 o'clock this morning. When Niland arrived, at 9:45, he said the foreman told the Grand Jury had decided not to hear him, but "would send him a letter."

The contents of the proposed letter were not intimated to him, Niland said, and he is not anxious to receive a letter, anyway.

Niland said that one excuse he has heard for the failure of the jury to take up the matter is that some of the evidence submitted by the Legislature to District Attorney Pelletier is missing.

Niland was a candidate for election to the City Council, and was arrested in the campaign for carrying a banner with the words, "Indict the bribegivers and the bribe-takers."

COAL MAN SAVES BOY BY PLUNGE INTO RIVER

Hornell, N. Y., Dec. 17.—Benjamin Gardner, coal wagon driver, saved the life of Francis Jones, a small boy, and almost got away before anyone learned who he was. Francis was going down for the second time when Gardner leaped from his wagon and plunged into the icy river, into which the boy had fallen.

ADIE'S COMPANY GETS DAMAGES OF $1,803,364

Effort to Corner the War Market in Quicksilver Features Evidence

Damages of $1,803,364.65 have been awarded the New Idria Mining Company of California, of which Andrew Adie of Boston is president, in a verdict against the American and British Manufacturing Company of New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The verdict was awarded by a jury in United States Court in Providence, where the suit has been in progress for weeks.

An alleged attempt by the American and British concern to corner the quicksilver market just before the United States entered the war figured largely in the evidence, as did the alleged breach of contract by the same company.

Alfred Headley, who was chairman of the directors of the American and British Company in 1916, testified that his company had contracted with the New Idria people for 10,000 flasks of quicksilver at $250 a flask.

The purpose of this huge purchase, he admitted, was to get enough quicksilver to consutute a corner and control the market.

But, he declared, the New Idria company failed to deliver on time and the American and British concern refused to accept delivery when it was made.

Witnesses for the New Idria Company, however, told the jury that the quicksilver had been delivered on time, and had to be sold in the East at a loss of more than 1,500,000, when the purchasing concern failed to accept.

Some trouble in collecting the judgment may be experienced, as the suit was won against the American and British Manufacturing Company, which has since reorganized as the American and British Manufacturing Corporation, which went into the hands of a receiver in 1920.

POLICE PROBE BLAZE IN OLD ORCHARD BARN

Old Orchard, Me., Dec. 17.—The local police and detectives said to represent insurance companies have been making an investigation of the fire which destroyed the barn on the J. H. The owners have not been paid for the cattle destroyed because of tuberculosis, with which they were affected. Board members declare that no money can be paid unless the General Assembly passes a special deficiency appropriation at its coming session.

RHODE ISLAND GRANITE MEN ASK $1 INCREASE

Westerly, R. I., Dec. 17.—Threatened with a reduction in wages on January 1 by the retail granite manufacturers' association, stone cutters, stone and blacksmiths employed in the granite cutting industry here have countered with a demand that their wages be increased $1 a day and they be allowed rest periods mornings and afternoon and a full day off on Saturdays. The industry is the largest in town.

THEFT OF XMAS TREES FROM WOODS DENOUNCED

Commissioner W. A. L. Baxley of the State Department of Conservation issued warning to the public today against the cutting down of Christmas trees, shrubs and other greenery for Yuletide decorations without authority of the owners. He calls attention to the penalty of fine or imprisonment for the offense. This also holds true for persons invading State forests and reservations for this purpose, he said.

GIRL DECOY OF AUTO BANDITS CONFESSES

Recognized by Victim Who Had Been Kidnaped and Robbed; 4 Arrested

Lawrence, Dec. 17.—Three men and a young woman were arraigned in the District Court here today charged with a daring kidnaping and robbery of Nicholas Kriton, seventy years old, of No. 344 Lowell street. All pleaded not guilty. The men were held in default of $1,000 bail each and the girl in $500 for hearing Monday.

The police are seeking a fourth man believed by them to have been the originator of a plot to kidnap Kriton and to have fee the attack on the old man.

The gang is believed to have learned that Kriton withdrew $1,400 from a savings bank Thursday and immediately plotted to rob him. They succeeded only in obtaining $26 in cash and a gold watch. The police say all four have confessed.

BELIEVE WOMAN A DECOY.

The police believe that the young woman was used as a decoy in the robbery. She has been a waitress in local restaurants and has, it is said, worked with some of the defendants. Those arrested are: Beatrice Bored, twenty-three years old, of No. 232 Broadway, a waitress; Sam Nichols, twenty-five years old, of No. 486 Common street; Fred Allen, twenty-three years old, of Broadway, and Aime Moreau, twenty-four years old, of Essex street. They are all restaurant workers.

The robbery was one of the most daring ever committed here. An automobile stopped up to the old Kriton as he was near his home, speeding away through streets filled with persons returning from work. A handkerchief, saturated with ether, was pressed to the man's nose, rendering him partly unconscious.

THREATENED WITH DEATH.

Kriton told the police that he struggled with his assailants but that they overpowered him and threatened him with death if he made an outcry. The machine in which the robbers rode was hired from a public taxicab driver.

The arrests were made largely through assistance given by the taxi driver. He identified the young woman on the street and caused her arrest. She was apparently ready to leave the city. Her arrest led to the capture of the men.

Considerable delay was caused through the gang's attempt to flee. He did not arrive home until a long time after the robbery and he was almost exhausted from his long walk and fight with his assailants.

Mr. Kriton, who is a mill worker, is in a weakened condition and is detained at the home of his son, George Kriton.

The Methuen police have hopes of connecting the gang with recent breaks in that town.

Dix of New York, mother of Mrs. Leeson, receives a like amount. The total assets of the Dix estate are $661,581.

LEADS GAY LIFE ON $17 A WEEK, WIFE CHARGES

Arthur L. Amaden of Worcester is a gay Lothario on $17 a week, counsel for Mrs. Christine Amaden, who is suing for divorce, told Judge Bell in the Superior court. Attorney Tupper declared there was a Quincy woman in Amaden's life. Amaden had been earning $32 a week and until recently had been paying $15 a week for the support of his wife and three children, counsel said. He asked that the amount be increased. Judge Sisk replied that such orders in the past had been based on wartime wages.

TURKEYS SOAR TO 65 CTS. AT WHOLESALE

Highest Mark Ever Reached Is Set in Boston Market; Price May Soar

Fancy Northern turkeys sold in the Boston wholesale market today for 65 cents a pound. This is the highest price that turkeys ever brought in the wholesale market here. Western turkeys are selling up to 55 cents a pound in large lots. These prices are nearly 10 cents a pound higher than those obtaining during the peak of after-the-war inflation.

In New York fancy Virginia turkeys—corresponding to Vermont turkeys in this market—are selling for 62 cents a pound in the wholesale markets.

Unless the supply increases, it is considered probable that young Northern turkeys will sell for approximately $1 per pound before Christmas.

Vermont Man Leaps to Cowcatcher as Train Hits His Auto

Proctorsville, Vt., Dec. 17.—Ordinary moving picture thrillers were pushed into the discard here when Charles Krasofsky of Springfield, Vt., leaped from his automobile to the cowcatcher of a train which was going forty miles an hour, and saved his life as the train struck his auto.

Although slightly injured, Krasofsky clung to his perilous perch until the engineer succeeded in bringing his train to a stop.

The automobile was rolled along the track in front of the engine for a distance of eighty feet before it was hurled to one side.

In the automobile at the time was John Cichanowitz. He was badly bruised and suffered a broken leg as he was rolled along.

MRS. RAIZEN IS EXAMINED FOR SANITY

"Mystery Man" in Case Is Revealed by Police as Waiter She Knew

New York, Dec. 17.—Counsel for Mrs. Lillian Raizen, who shot and killed Dr. Abraham Glickstein, in his Brooklyn office last Saturday night, conferred today with four alienists, who have been examining the women, to decide upon her defence.

Meanwhile, they have revealed the identity of the "mysterious man" in the case as Albert Bradley, sixty-year-old waiter.

It was Bradley who met Mrs. Raizen at the pier when she arrived from the South on the day before Dr. Glickstein was killed and who took her to the hotel where she spent that night.

Bradley became acquainted with Mrs. Raizen when she worked in a chili factory and took her meals in a restaurant where he was employed. He said she had befriended him on various occasions.

He produced two letters which she had written him while in Florida. They referred to her being ill and suffering from "many troubles." The second one asked him to meet her at the pier when her boat came in.

"I met her last Friday morning," he said. "We sat on the ship and talked two hours. She talked wildly and incoherently. She told me that the cause of her long suffering was a man who many years before had wronged her.

"She did not name him then. She was thin and drawn, not like her old self at all. I took her to her hotel and left her.

"She asked me to call at the hotel again Saturday afternoon, and I did so. We went to lunch, and she again talked wildly. This time she told me that Dr. Glickstein had wronged her, but she did not say that she intended to seek vengeance or that she had a revolver.

"I tried to persuade her to go home. She said that maybe she would go home that night and promised to call me up. At 6:30 she telephoned me, but I could not understand what she was trying to say. A few minutes later she called again and said, 'I have shot him.' Then she hung up."

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

VELVET is uppermost in the mind of Paris this season, and velvet in a soft shade of violet may go to tea with full assurance that it will be entirely appropriate if asked to dinner, as well. It is in a slender chemise frock that Doeuillet uses this tissue, and sections of a crepe in a lighter shade of violet, attached beneath pearl cabochons, fall in points below the skirt-edge.

THE coat of a three-piece costume of beige velvet boasts a huge waist, deep collar of skunk and many thin little fur bands to trim its sleeves and full skirt. The bodice of the frock is sleeveless, with a "bateau" neckline, and there is a row of tiny velvet buttons down the front. A flower design in silver thread embroiders the lower half of the skirt.

JUDGE ORDERS COUPLE TO "SPOON"

Will See if Charges of Mrs. Shuman Against Husband Can Be Proven

Worcester, Dec. 17.—Judge Forbes, before whom the suit for separate support brought by Mrs. Ida Day Shuman against Harold Adams Shuman, Clinton manufacturer, is being tried, has ordered an unique experiment to be made in the trial of the case this evening.

If the moonlight permits, a man and woman will be placed in a closed auto with instructions to "spoon" with each other as a loving couple would do. Their actions will be observed through the glass of the machine in an effort to substantiate the stories told by witnesses for Mrs. Shuman during the trial.

Mrs. Shuman broke down and wept bitterly when called upon by her attorney, Frank B. Hall, to tell the court of an operation she alleges her husband compelled her to undergo after their marital relations had ceased.

She testified he had told her he positively could not afford to bring up a larger family than they already had. She declared she protested, but finally yielded and went to New York, where the operation was performed.

Much of yesterday's examination of Mrs. Shuman was in the nature of a general "cleaning up of points made by the defence," according to Hall. "Reggie" Bates, said by counsel for Shuman, to have been riding with Mrs. Shuman, admitted the charge, and also that Mrs. Shuman had engaged him to watch Shuman and Miss Plunkett, one of the women named by Mrs. Shuman in her suit.

Attorney Buttrick for the defence in cross-examination, asked a number of questions regarding a Dr. Monahan, who had been ill, and who is named as another of Mrs. Shuman's friends with whom she went riding in the auto.

She explained that as the doctor had been sick she was merely trying to aid his recovery by taking him on auto rides.

The same explanation was made regarding a man named Cunnings, who had been wounded during the war. She said she took Bates out to Camp Devens because he had told her that he had business there and she was willing to oblige him. Bates is a chauffeur in the fire department.

Bates and a Miss Nellis Veronica Shaughnessy of Clinton told of having seen Shuman and Miss Plunkett on the steps of a local hotel two years ago.

Bates also told of having seen Miss Plunkett and Shuman in the latter's car in August of 1920. The car, he said, was standing in an alley back of the Plunkett home.

The chauffeur also told of having seen the manufacturer with a Miss Fairfield.

'MESSIAH' WILL BE GIVEN TOMORROW

Handel and Haydn Also to Sing Oratorio in Symphony Hall Monday

Two holiday performances of Handel's "Messiah" will be given in Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 and Monday evening at 8 o'clock sharp by the historical Handel and Haydn Choral Society. The chorus of 400 will join forces with a large symphony orchestra and a celebrated quartet of soloists under the supervision of the conductor of the society, Emil Mollenhauer. Dr. Handel's masterpiece may have a performance in every way notable. Of the soloists engaged for these performances, Lambert Murphy, the tenor, is most familiar, although Reed Patton, the splendid bass, is enthusiastically remembered from his performances here last season. Grace Kerns and Frieda Klink are the soprano and contralto.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

Gilbert & Sullivan's Mikado will be the eleventh week opera offering at the Arlington Theatre. This charming travesty of Japan has been the greatest popular favorite of all comic operas since its original production in the eighties. It was first produced at the Savoy Theatre, London, March 14, 1885. The first American production took place in Chicago the same year and in 1919 an all star revival was made at the Casino Theatre, New York. Mikado is the most popular of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. It contains more gems of the whistling sort than a dozen of the present day successful comedies. Following the Mikado the Boston Society of Singers announce for the holiday week starting with a special Monday matinee, December 26, the great fairyland extravaganza, Jack and the Beanstalk. Written by Barnett and Sloane and originally produced by the Cadets, it is the extravaganza which made Madge Lessing famous.

NYIREGYHAZI AND THOMAS

John Charles Thomas, the strikingly gifted young American baritone, and Erwin Nyiregyhazi, the phenomenal Hungarian pianist, will appear in a concert together in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, January 1st, at 3.30.

Nyiregyhazi, the remarkable genius of nineteen from the land of Liszt, proved the foremost new pianist of the season when he made his American debut in New York.

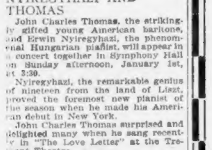
SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

"The Harvest of Life," a vital, poignant and gripping drama of mother love and self-sacrifice, is announced as the gala attraction for the coming week by the Somerville Players, beginning with the usual Monday matinee. The piece is replete with thrilling scenes that set one's blood a-tingle, and contains much of the element of human interest. There are many good parts in the play. Emil Mollenhauer will be seen as "Lettke Vane" while Arthur Howard will play "Noel Musgrave."



RHEA DIVELEY

ROSING

Vladimir Rosing, who is to give a series of three recitals on the evening of January 3, 9 and 11, at Jordan Hall, is a Russian tenor born on January 23, 1890, at Petrograd. His father was one of the foremost of Russian barristers and wanted him to follow the same profession. Rosing, however, at the early age of eleven, discovered singing in his voice, and while going through the usual routine of education necessary to the profession for which his father had destinated him, he studied singing with several of the best-known masters in Russia, including Finger, Tartaroff and Madame Kartena.

CHALIAPINE'S FAREWELL

Feador Chaliapine, the great Russian bass singer, will give his last concert in America before returning to his own country in Symphony Hall, Wednesday evening, December 28, at 8:15.

When this striking and unique figure in the world of music impersonated "Boris Godunoff" in Mussorgsky's opera recently in a special performance by the Metropolitan Opera Company, his supreme art made a memorable impression upon the great audience present.

FRIEDA HEMPEL

One of the finest Sunday concerts of the season in Symphony Hall is afforded by Frieda Hempel, the splendidly gifted coloratura soprano, who will sing on Sunday afternoon, January 15, at 3.30. Admired alike for the wonders of her voice, the beauty and distinction of her programs and for her magnificent interpretation of them, Miss Hempel has abandoned operatic singing to concentrate every effort upon concerts, in which perhaps she is heard to the finest advantage.

HEIFETZ TO RETURN

The return to Boston of Jascha Heifetz, the remarkable young Russian violinist, whose genius is regarded by many as unexcelled, is eagerly awaited. Having returned from his tour of the world, which occupied last season and was exceptionally successful, he will give a concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, January 8, at 3.30.

TURN OPERA HOUSE INTO CIRCUS

Mammoth Production From the Hippodrome to Open in Back Bay Christmas Week

If Boston still has a home for grand opera, the Shuberts can be thanked for it, since their purchase of the big house on Huntington avenue some years ago nipped a scheme to turn it into a storage warehouse. The warehouse fate still hangs over it, and it may some day happen if the Boston public does not more heartily patronize the attractions which the Shuberts manage to send there.

For Christmas week a Mammoth Indoor Mid-Winter Circus is on the docket, with Poodles Hannaford and his family of daring riders heading the bill. The stage of the opera house is one of the largest in the world and can easily accommodate the ponderous pachyderms, and other spectacular features of a real circus.

If the enterprise is a success it gives rise to the suggestion that making Hippodrome productions at the opera house on the scale of the New York Hippodrome might be a popular thing to do.

A Cosmopolitan.

Olga Petrova is one of the most unusual women on the American stage. Born in Warsaw, of a Polish mother and English father, she was sent to school in Brussels at the age of eight. Then she went to school in France. Next we find her studying the drama in Bohemia, and then she bobbed up in London, playing in the troupe of Herbert Tree.

Her New York debut was made in the ill-fated duplicate of the Folies Bergere of Paris. That enterprise blew up leaving only Petrova.

Since that time her rise has been rapid. She became a vaudeville headliner, and then a legitimate star. Next we find her in the movies, where she quickly became a favorite. While she was banging away at the theatre she also wielded a doughty pen, worked as a reporter in London, and wrote novels, short stories, essays and plays.

"The White Peacock," was supposed to include some quaint doctrines regarding sex and birth control, but by the time it had reached the boards in Boston, any views Petrova may have had regarding such matters had disappeared. It is now a picturesque melodrama, only that and nothing more. But to use as popular theatrical expression Petrova is a wonderful "clothes horse," and her costumes dazzle the women.

Got Buffalo's Bill.

When Fred Stone saw Buffalo Bill shooting from horseback and breaking innumerable glass balls, he said to a friend:

"That would go big in a theatre."

"Except," said the fellow player, "the theatre roof would shut right after the first week, and you would have to shoot from under an iron umbrella to protect you from falling shot."

It took Stone two years to get around to out Buffalo Bill. And he does it. The old scout used a shotgun which threw fifty or more balls to lead over a circular area perhaps ten feet in diameter. Any single shot will break the target. When Buffalo Bill was almost blind he could still break the glass balls.

Stone, compelled to cut down the range, uses a rifle instead of a shotgun, and it carries a single bullet, so each shot is a clean miss or a clean hit. Despite dancing around when shooting and using artificial light, Stone's record during the first 200 performances of "Tip Top" was 1931 breaks in 2,000 attempts."

They Still Like "Mikado."

The announcement of "Mikado" by the Boston Society of Singers drew an instant response at the box office. It is rather surprising that this Japanese comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan is the one of their numerous works which still seems to be depended upon to pull out big audiences. Anything "if anything" between better music and funnier situations. During the Gilbert and Sullivan craze in the eighties, it drew better than anything else. Nowadays it runs a good second to "Mikado." The other operettas of these writers, "Iolanthe," "Gondoliers," "Sorcerer," "Box and Cox," "Ruddygore," "Patience" and "Ivanhoe," have little or no attractions for modern audiences. The music of these works is little inferior to "Mikado" and "Pinafore," but the libretto is pretty well out of date. You have to be a scholar nowadays to understand the satire of "Patience" and "Iolanthe," and few theatre-goers are scholars out of school.

The opera troupe at the Arlington have temporarily dropped heavy works and are adjusting themselves to the merry melodies of "Mikado," and after that to "Jack and the Beanstalk" most popular of Christmas extravaganzas.

Delysia Makes Her Bow.

Alice Delysia, the French musical hall star, who has created more commotion in this country than any of her countrywomen since Gaby Deslys, will be on view at the Wilbur in "Afgar" Christmas week.

According to the press agent she earns a salary of $4,000 per week, and it's paid her by Morris Gest, who used to sell papers in Boston for $3 per week, or less.

Delysia, herself, has known poverty. As a young girl she was a midinette in Paris, which means a messenger girl from a millinery shop. Every year there is a midinette running race down the Paris boulevards, and in 1912 Delysia won the race. Her athletic build and her extraordinary physical attractions made her famous over night. She got a job in a music hall immediately and never worked as a midinette again. Soon after she went to London, where she quickly became a big favorite.

The feature of "Afgar" in New York was Delysia's skill at removing so much of her clothing without police interference. It is probable that one will be able to see her best, and most, in Boston the opening night.

MID-WINTER CIRCUS AT OPERA

Mid-Winter Indoor Circus—The grand inaugural of this latest Shubert enterprise will be at the Boston Opera House Christmas week, starting with a Christmas afternoon performance on Monday, December 26. There will be two performances daily and the engagement is for one week only.

While the regular afternoon and evening performances will start at 2 and 8 p. m., the doors will be open an hour earlier to take in the free sideshow and the curio hall. Heading the imposing array for Christmas week will be the renowned Hannaford Family, with "Poodles" Hannaford, the world's greatest riding comedian, whose failure to open the eyes of the spectator, and keep them open, will be John Robinson's Military Elephants, eighteen tons of animal intelligence. Other features will include Joe Fanton and company, in an act called "Moments of Suspense," three men, daredevil athletes on the flying rings; Mme. Everest's Monkey Circus; Lipinski's dogs, in a frolic at Luna Park, including "Shooting the Chutes"; the Arca Brothers, marvelous hand balancers; Olympia Desvall and her company, including her world-famous winged-horse, "Tiff-Tiff," and her marvelous equine and canine actors.

BOSTON THEATRE

Tom Mix, favorite screen portrayer of Western roles, will be seen at the Boston Theatre next week in his latest release, "Trailin," adapted from the well-known novel of Max Brand.

McISAAC says that

"ONLY 38," the latest Thomas comedy, has a special charm, a sweet and unhackneyed theme, and an excellent cast. Last week.

PETROVA, the picturesque film star, is personally appearing at the Selwyn Theatre in "The White Peacock," written by herself, a melodrama in Spanish costume.

"MR. PIM PASSES BY," a cheerful little comedy of British domesticity, skillfully done by Laura Hope Crewes and Dudley Digges. Hollis.

FRED STONE, in "Tip-Top," at the Colonial, offers a spirited musical comedy full of pretty girls, clever dancing and his own feats of skill.

THE BIG FILMS

"QUEEN OF SHEBA, at Tremont Temple, announces the last fortnight of a brilliant Oriental film drama,

MARY PICKFORD, in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," goes into the Globe for a brief engagement.

COMING

D. W. Griffith's "Two Orphans," the latest great feature by the producer of "Way Down East" and "Birth of a Nation."

TREMONT TEMPLE

Rev. M. Halpern, noted Jewish cantor, for years prominently identified with one of the largest synagogues in this city, has been especially engaged by the management of William Fox's gorgeous and impressive spectacle, "Queen of Sheba," now current at the Tremont Temple. The Rev. M. Halpern and his talented son, Irving, synchronize several of the scenes of this vivid and colorful picture at each performance. This added attraction lends fervor to heighten the entertaining value in witnessing this truly great production. As a spectacle it surpasses anything ever produced on the screen. Musical Director Frank Truda has arranged a musical score in keeping with the picture.

GLOBE THEATRE

The Globe Theatre has arranged an extraordinary program for the coming week, during which time they will present, by special request, two of the greatest photo-productions made during the season. The pictures unscreen two of the greatest drawing cards in the field of the silent art, Charlie Chaplin, in his million dollar production, "The Kid," a story that compels attention and excites much genuine laughter, in which Jackie Coogan plays a prominent part. The companion picture will offer the inimitable Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro," a production replete with tense and exciting situations. Both of these pictures will be shown for a single week only, with continuous policy.

BERT LYTELL AT THE MODERN

A comedy of romance and adventure and a drama of humble, ordinary folks, mark the presentation of a brace of promising photoplays to be shown for their Boston showings at the Modern and Beacon Theatres the coming week. Bert Lytell, justly a favorite star, will be seen in "The Idle Rich."

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA

An out-of-the-ordinary vaudeville act, headed by the famous musical travesty, "An Arabian Nightmare," will feature the generous bill this week at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia. In the headline act the scenery is of the dazzling, colorful Oriental type and the music and fun fast and fascinating. Among the other good vaudeville acts are two that will attract widespread attention.

"HAPPY GO LUCKY"

An unusually fine cast will appear in "Happy Go Lucky," the delightful comedy by Ian Hay which A. H. Woods is sending to the Selwyn Theatre for a brief engagement beginning with a special Christmas matinee, December 26. Besides O. P. Heggie in his laughable and famous role of Samuel Stillbottle, there are such players as A. C. Andrews, Charlotte Granville, Templar Saxe, Alice Clute, Harry MacNaughton, Gypsy O'Brien, J. H. Brewer, Dennis King, Alice Mosley, Louise Emery, Juna Bradley and others.

"IRENE" IS TO RETURN TO HUB

In the special company which will present "Irene" at the Shubert Theatre commencing Monday, December 26th, will be seen the principal members of the New York Vanderbilt Theatre cast, all of whom have made the biggest success of their careers in this musical sensation, which ran there for two solid years.

WILLIAM HODGE

William Hodge in a new play! That is the announcement that came from Lee Shubert yesterday. And more important still, the popular star and his latest vehicle will be presented here at the Plymouth Theatre, beginning with a special matinee on Christmas Day, Monday, December 26; coming direct from a highly successful engagement in New York City.

"Beware of Dogs" is the title of Mr. Hodge's new play. It has to do with a young city chap ordered to the country for his health. There he acquires, among other things, a dog farm.

PETROVA AT SOMERVILLE

Manager McArdle of the Somerville Playhouse has arranged a guest matinee to be given in honor of Madame Petrova at the Somerville Theatre, on next Tuesday afternoon, December 20. Madame Petrova will journey to Somerville and occupy a box to witness "The Harvest of Life," the attraction presented by the capable Somerville Players.

COULD USE COLLEGE DECREE

Walter Brower's One Regret Is That He Cannot Write His Own Prescriptions

Like a ray of sunshine on a murky day comes Walter S. Brower, monologist and story-teller, a feature of the Shubert vaudeville bill at the Majestic the coming week. Brower is one of those smiling personalities occasionally encountered upon the stage, and elsewhere, who can provide clean, wholesome entertainment without apparent effort. No special costume, make-up or attempted characterization is necessary to aid this young man in fastening the attention of his audience or holding it.

With a delivery resembling that of the late Ezra Kendall, he prattles in an absent-minded and somewhat impersonal way of his wedding and family inconsequentionalities, keeping his hearers in an uproar of laughter.

A product of the "Moonshine Hills" of Kentucky, Walter Brower passed his boyhood days in and near the little town of Mount Washington, where with strange foresight and regard for the needs of the future, every well-regulated household was equipped with its own private still. The occasional visits of revenue officers with the attendant fighting, shooting and man-hunting turned him against "moonshining" as a career, and, hearkening to the wishes of his family, he undertook to prepare himself to follow medicine. Whether there was any subtle relation in those facts is not of record, nor has Brower made any disclosures in that direction. In any event he entered the University of Kentucky, at Lexington, and subsequently took the medical and pharmaceutical course of that school at Louisville.

The stage lured him and his only regret is that he didn't get his degree in medicine so he could write his own prescriptions.

PARK THEATRE

Next week's bill at the Park Theatre offers contrast and special worthiness in the two feature photoplays to be presented. "Mother Eternal" with Vivian Martin pictured in the leading role presents a story promising a wealth of heart-appeal. Its theme treats of the triumphs of mother love in the face of trials. The plot concerns a young wife whose husband is killed in a labor dispute. With a five-year-old girl to care for, her burden is made heavier by the birth of a boy baby. Because of his unwanted coming the young mother consents to the substitution of her offspring for the dead infant born to the wife of a wealthy man, who remains ignorant of the exchange.

Many years pass and the mother, old and broken in spirit, lives unnoticed in the home of her married daughter, a troublesome burden to the young couple. To bring them relief she decided to go away, and finding no haven, decides upon suicide. But through a train of unusual circumstances her son is discovered to her, he learns her secret, and happiness comes to her at last. The role of the mother in the two extremes of age is said to provide a trying role for Miss Martin's exceptional abilities and should furnish a special attraction to her host of admirers.

"The Hunch" is a merry comedy founded upon Percival Wilde's story of a young Wall Street broker.

SPEED, MORE SPEED

The increasing demand for action and variety in theatrical entertainment was interestingly discussed today by Joe Freed, veteran comedian, who is one of the principals in "The Sugar Plums" burlesque company at the Gayety Theatre.

"Today the American people, and the Canadians, too, are insistent in their demands for rapid action in the shows they witness. The production in a burlesque, a drama, a farce, or a musical comedy.

"A few years ago a play or a burlesque could be built around one principal and the action could proceed surely on with no other thought but the one original theme being introduced.

"This is no longer the case, however, as at present the theatre-going public wants a play to move swiftly, with the plot and action changing constantly. There must be not only suspense, but pep, and a lot of it. To supply this demand for action and variety we of the burlesque profession have added vaudeville novelties to our shows. And we never forget the essential element of speed in everything."

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

A typical holiday bill of extraordinary merit is arranged by the management of Loew's Orpheum Theatre for the coming week. For the first three days the vaudeville will be topped by Phil Adams and Girls in a musical satire, called "Broadway Belles." Other headline acts include Brady and Mahoney, De Vine and Williams, Armstrong and Tyson, the Four Bellhops and Busses dogs. The feature photoplay will unfold the first screenings in Boston of William Fox's new and gripping production, "Desert Blossoms," featuring William Russell, who is accorded excellent support by a large number of prominent players of the screen. The latest events will be shown in motion pictures and a new comedy will complete the program for the first half. On Thursday there will be the usual change.

ALICE DELYSIA

Mlle. Alice Delysia, the most sensational star London, Paris and New York has ever known, will make her initial appearance in this city Monday, December 26th, at the Wilbur Theatre, for a limited engagement under the direction of F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, by arrangement with Charles B. Cochran, the London theatrical manager.

Delysia's introduction will be made in "Afgar," the Oriental musical extravaganza which bears the mark of approval of the Follies Bergere, Paris, the London Pavilion, London, and the Central Theatre, New York. To make the attraction all the stronger Messrs. Comstock and Gest enlisted the services of Paul Poiret to design the exquisite costumes for the entire production. These are a triumph in the art of Oriental design and color, said to be bewildering beyond description.

TWO ORPHANS AT LAST ON SCREEN

Lillian and Dorothy Gish in Cast of Famous Drama Filmed by David W. Griffith

An event noteworthy in the annals of Boston's theatrical history will be the world premiere on Monday evening, December 26, of David Wark Griffith's latest and probably most notable work, a spectacular and elaborate development made for the screen of Lennery's famous play, "The Two Orphans," which will be seen for the first time at the Tremont Theatre. Aside from the interest aroused by the fact that Griffith will be on hand and address the audience, he will also introduce in person the famous Gish sisters, who play the title roles.

In "The Two Orphans" Griffith has delved into the world history and brought forth scenes of the French Revolution, probably the most dynamically dramatic period in the history of civilization. There will probably be much written and discussion concerning Griffith's treatment of this period.

An all-star cast of noted artists have been entrusted with the principal roles. Among these are Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Joseph Schildkraut, Frank Losee, Catherine Emmette, Morgan Wallace, Lucille La Verne, Sheldon Lewis, Signor F. Puglis, Creighton Hale, Leola King, Monte Blue, Sidney Herbert, Kate Bruce, Leo Kolmer, Adolphe Lestina and ten thousand others take part in the various scenes.

A Modest Star.

Mary Ryan thinks that Maud Adams should be playing the role in which she is herself appearing in "Only 38." She says quite sincerely:

"I never liked any play in which I have appeared as much as I like this one. I had no thought of acting in "Only 38" when I first read it. I only thought what a part it would make for Maud Adams if she should return to the stage. The lightness and wistfulness with which A. E. Thomas conceived the little widow would have been marvelously exemplified by her. But Miss Adams chooses not to act, and I am playing the part I wanted to see her play."

There are one or two other parts in "Only 38," which are so good that they threaten the supremacy of the star. Many stars would insist upon their being reduced in importance. Miss Ryan insisted that they be left as the author intended them, preferring to keep the play symmetrical to increasing her own importance.

"Mr. Pim's" Author.

A. A. Milne, the author of "Mr. Pim Passes By," the delightful English comedy at the Hollis Street Theatre, was born in 1882, and after completing his education at Westminster and at Trinity College, Cambridge he began his journalistic career in London in 1903. From 1906 until the outbreak of the war he was assistant editor of Punch, publishing meanwhile "The Day's Play" in 1910, "The Holiday Round" in 1912, and "Once a Week" in 1914.

From the preface of his "First Plays," published in 1919, and from a friend of his living in New York, one gets the impression of the playwright that anyone could or would appreciate his efforts. There is a suggestion in this impression which forces a certain differentiation between him and Bernard Shaw.

In spite of himself, however, Milne seems to be becoming famous both in England and in America. His collection of charmingly whimsical essays "If, Or History Rewritten," and little stories unassuming—has found a New York publisher. "Belinda" was enacted in the United States by Ethel Barrymore, and "Mr. Pim Passes By," after a long and successful run in London and Paris, duplicated that success in New York City, is now finding favor with the large audiences everywhere.

Mr. Milne's parents intended that the son should enter the Civil Service, India. He decided for himself, however, and took up literature. The first year he received $1,000 for his work, next year he doubled that income and today he is accounted highly prosperous as literary men go.

When Hodge Draws All His Salaries.

William Hodge is coming in "Beware of the Dog." When Hodge goes to the paymaster every week he draws his salary as a star, then he draws his commissions on the week's business, due him as star, then he draws his share of the profit as one of the producers, and then he pulls down the author's royalties. When he is all done he has quite a roll.

Cream of Irene Companies.

Patti Harrold, the leading woman of "Irene," which returns next week, is the daughter of Orville Harrold, the tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Miss Harrold headed the New York company after Edith Day went to London. The special Boston company of "Irene," which played here last year, has been broken up, but some of its best players went into the New York cast, including Flo Irwin and Jere Delaney.

WHERE WAS SHEBA?

In the extensive researches conducted by J. Gordon Edwards, who directed "Queen of Sheba," the gorgeous William Fox spectacle, and by Virginia Tracy, who wrote the screen version of the famous story, much difficulty was encountered regarding the exact location of the land of Sheba. They discovered the following declarsion of its geographical position in "Sheba and Her Times," written by Professor Arnold Dechenburg. Professor Dechenburg stated that Sheba unquestionably was the land on the southern coast of Persia, which was originally part of the ancient kingdom of Darius, but won its freedom from the conquerers approximately in the year 1846 B. C.

The record runs: There are reasons to believe that most of the records of the Sheban kings in manuscript form were destroyed in the great fire which wiped out the famous library of Alexandria; but historical references agree that the Sheban people developed the higher forms of culture and architecture, and that the kingdom for nearly five hundred years was a powerful and independent State, until finally it was consolidated once more with the Persian kingdom through force of conquest.

TILLIE IS A TALKING ELEPHANT

Animal 10½ Years Old Says "Papa" With a Distinctness That Is Uncanny

John Robinson's Military Elephants might be termed the heaviest act in the circus world. Mr. Robinson, one of the best known animal trainers in the world, has specialized in recent years in training these huge pachyderms and eighteen tons of elephants will occupy a part of the entertainment in the Shubert mid-winter indoor circus at the Boston Opera House Christmas week. Mr. Robinson's elephants number four, "Tillie," "Clara," "Pettie" and "Tiny," and they constitute the biggest act of its kind.

Robinson's elephants give an act of a very different style to what one expects from these huge animals. Their intelligence is astonishing, and to his training of his pets, Mr. Robinson has foregone the ordinary tricks which the public has become accustomed to seeing in order that he might present something new in animal training.

It is an act that will please all patrons of the circus. It goes without saying that the youngsters will be exceptionally well entertained and the intelligence of the big brutes will bring its full quota of appreciation from the older folks.

"Tillie" is the oldest elephant before the public, being 10 years old. When she was born, Boston had a pity population of a few thousand and most of our main thoroughfares were cowpaths. "Tillie" is the only talking elephant known to zoological experts. She says "Papa" with a distinctness that is uncanny.

IRISH PLAYERS

The Irish Players at the National Theatre are now playing their fourth successful week, with a change of program each week.

BABS OLCOTT

All the elements that enter into an Irish production are embodied in "Happy Days in Ireland," commencing with Mart Maurice's songs, "Little Mother of Mine," "Believe Me," and "For Freedom and Ireland." Then comes Eileen Shannon, with her violin and bow, who mingles the tears and smiles of old Erin; Hugh McDougal, the old pup of Irish song and stories, rambles you from one county of Ireland to the other with the ease and grace of a jaunting car driver; the Marr and Dwyer sisters, dancing in the mountains of Wicklow, and Babs Evelyn Olcott, winsome little Irish colleen, carries you to the good old days of the ever-loved Chauncey. The last act is "Happy Days in Ireland."

SUGAR PLUMS COMING TO GAYETY

All-Star Cast of Burlesque Favorites Will Appear in Musical Extravaganza

"Sugar Plums," with an all-star cast of burlesque favorites presenting the cheery musical imagination, "Let 'er Rip," will be the attraction this week at the Gayety Theatre.

"Let 'er Rip" is described as a roaring musical farce, capably presented and interspersed with a number of bright and catchy melodies and a generous number of specialties.

Heading the company are two of the most popular comedians on the burlesque stage, Joe Freed and Artie Leeming. Supporting these players are Nadell and Follett, Harry and Ida Rose, Klara Hendrix and Tom Duffy.

The season's ensemble is characterized as "The Sugar Plum Chorus," for it has been said by theatrical critics that if the government should place a tax upon youthful forms these dainty singers and dancers would be in the surtax class.

THEATRICAL BALL

Preparations for the second annual Theatrical Ball are nearing completion. The committee is laboring strenuously and arranging a program that promises to be the most elaborate ever presented in the history of this city. It will be recalled that last year's event eclipsed anything of a similar nature given in Boston for more than a score of years. The Theatrical Ball for the coming year is scheduled to take place on Thursday evening, January 19th at Mechanics Building.

MISS WHITE COMES TO MAJESTIC

Late Star of "Jimmie" Has Joined the Shubert Vaudeville Circuit

Shubert vaudeville beginning next Monday afternoon at the Majestic Theatre will have as its headliner the Messrs. Shubert's latest acquisition, Frances White, late star of "Jimmie."

Another brilliant feature will be Francis Renault, who, to all appearances is a particularly good looking young woman with a voice of pleasing quality. The impression, however, is dissipated with the final disclosure that Renault is in reality a member of the male sex.

Another feature will be Torino, who comes to Shubert vaudeville direct from the London Coliseum, after completing a two-years tour of the world with his unique juggling specialties, surrounded by most beautiful stage settings; Kranz and White in musical foolishness; "The Broken Mirror," by Fred Schwarz Company; Walter Brower, "The Lone Comedian." Shubert Weekly News, a "Tad" comedy, and several other acts.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

Houdini, known all over the world as the elusive American, who so handcuffs, lock, or prison can hold, will head the all-star bill to be had at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. This favorite, who became a star in this city, breaking all records for long vaudeville runs, has prepared for his present vaudeville tour—undertaken in honor of the "Third of a Century" jubilee of Keith vaudeville—a feat never set, embodying the most stupendous, daring, unbelievable and dangerous escape of his career.

VIVIAN MADE CORRECT GUESS

Actress Foresaw Future of Cinema Would Challenge Theatrical Art for Eminence

The migration of players to and from stage and screen is so common nowadays as to merit little if any passing comment. But motion picture followers with ready money will recall what a stir it created in theatre circles when Vivian Martin forsook the stage for the studio not so many years back.

Her playing the ingenue roles in "Officer 666," "Stop Thief," and "The Only Son," established her firmly as a stage favorite. But at a time when the motion picture was not held in such high favor as it now enjoys, Miss Martin forsook the stage with the declaration that she saw that the future of the cinema would ably challenge the older theatrical art for eminence.

Her words proved prophetic, and with the march of the motion picture's popularity Miss Martin's ascendancy to fame as a screen star became assure fact. Many screen productions with her as star have enjoyed great favor, and her visits in pictures have been eagerly awaited and happily received. And again she comes in a new production, "Mother Eternal," which will have its first Boston showings at the Park Theatre this week.

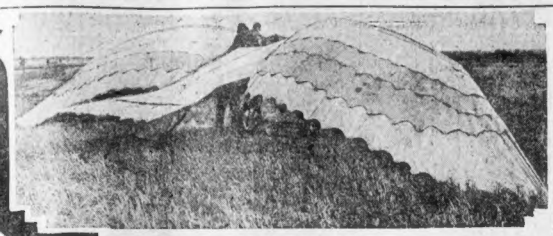
WORTH WHILE PICTORIAL NEWS---ON THE BOSTON STAGE AND OFF

HE SPILLED THE BEANS! Meet Mr. Pim, who started all the trouble in the delightful play at the Hollis. Cleverly played by Erskine Sanford. The maid, Anne, is portrayed by Madeleine Barr.



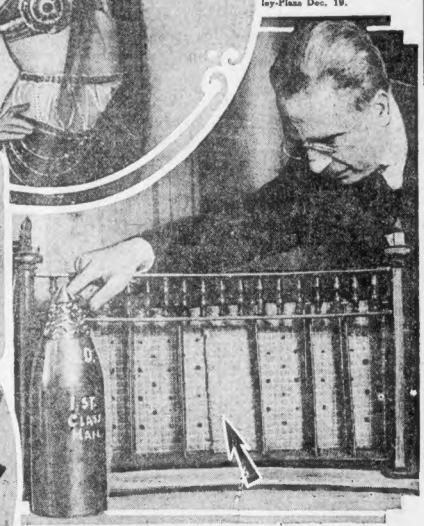
HEARTLESS! This hawk-like airplane, the invention of Herr Schwerdt, a Berlin engineer, flies without an engine. Like a glider, but can travel a considerable distance. Germans are not permitted to make real airplanes. (Int.)

DORIS BLACK, pupil of Amelia Burnham Studio, who dances "The Golden Whirl" at the Boston American Christmas Fund Charity Ball in the Copley-Plaza Dec. 19.

THUMBS DOWN! And fingers, too. Postal savings depositors must have their finger prints taken. Heretofore anybody could cash certificates. "Finders was keepers." (Int.)

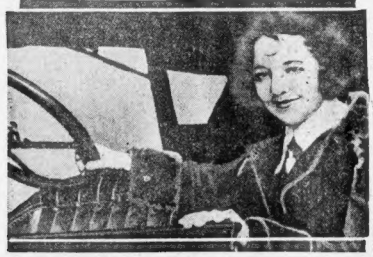
AN OLD FRIEND COMES BACK! "Irene," charming musical play, arrives at the Shubert Dec. 26, with Patti Harold, above, in graceful pose. Worth seeing again.

ALICE, WHERE ART THOU? If you mean Alice Delysia, she's coming to the Wilbur Dec. 26 in "Afgar," the sensational London production. Photo shows Miss Delysia in a characteristic pose.



"JIMMY" HERSELF! Frances White, inimitable, prankish and altogether easy to look at, comes to the Majestic next week as a vaudeville entertainer. No, girls, she hasn't changed her hairdress.

LEAVES SOON! Rabbi Joseph Saul Kornfeld of Columbus, O., newly appointed Minister to Persia, who sails short'y to fill new post. Born in Austria-Hungary and has lived here since 1907. Author of Jewish history. (Int.)



CIRCUS IS COMING! Above is a member of the Hannaford family, talented circus riders, coming with the indoor circus at the Boston Opera House Dec. 26.

LIKE Peggy O'Neil, she has a right to smile. 'Cause Peggy McAloon, 11 Calumet St., New Bedford, wins $5 in the Pretty Motorist Test. Enter today! Address Pictorial Editor.

LIVING UP TO ITS NAME! Paris, dizzy, daring and delightful, has created an envelope chemise that can be sent by mail in an ordinary envelope. It is cobwebby in texture. The idea, then, is sheer originality. Miss Virginia Cavanaugh is receiving one. (F.)

ZEE NERVE GRANDE! Bartholome, sculptor president of Beaux-Arts, who scathingly denounces French government's plan to tax art exhibits. (U. & U.)

WHAT HAPPENS If You Intercept a Message? Carlo Serra of N. Y., and a model of his message-carrying shell and receiving station. Shell may be fired by compressed air or from gun. Spring buffers catch shell. Hollow shell carries message. (Int.)

ANN DAVIS, who comes to the Plymouth in "Beware of Dogs" on Dec. 26. Wonder if it has anything to do with this "hot dog" they talk so much about.

A TRAMP IS MERELY THE EXPRESSION OF CONTENTMENT IN TERMS OF LAZINESS! That is the principal reason that most folks shoo them away from their farms and homes. But out in Strathmore, Cal., there's a prosperous orange grower, once a hobo himself, who befriends the "Weary Willies" of the road and provides them with food and a home—and all he asks in return is a little work on his plantation. The sign tells the story, with its very significant display of handy implements. Photo shows the owner "taking on" a so-called tramp. (Int.)

GOSH, It Must Be Great Fun to Listen to the Director! Los Angeles now has an honest-to-goodness all-Chinese movie company. So Mary Pickford had better watch her laurels. These young ladies are actresses in the company. Left to right, Lulu Wong, Bessie Wong and Anna Wong (maybe Wong is Chinese for Smith or Jones).

GIVE YOUR MITE TODAY TO HELP WAR HEROES

Buy a Forget-Me-Not and Boost Fund to Assist Disabled Veterans

Today is "Forget-Me-Not" Day for the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

You will not be allowed to let that fact slip your memory for long. Hundreds of Boston's prettiest girls from high school and college are going to throw themselves into the campaign to raise funds for aiding the sick and disabled men who saw service "over there," and see to it that you "remember the boys who fought."

SCHOOLS FORM CLUBS.

In virtually all the high schools of Boston Forget-Me-Not Day clubs have been formed, and the plans for today's activities outlined some time ago. Every one of the members has been trained in the work she is to do and the reasons why she is to do it.

The city has been zoned and districted, and each of the clubs assigned to some one particular zone or district.

Arrangements have been taken to "cover" the theatres at today's matinees and this evening's performance. The big office buildings of the city will be combed for contributions.

Hotels, cafes and restaurants will be visited and patrons asked to aid the cause, which Governor Cox has bought worthy of endorsement.

Other girls will be at the various railroad terminals and stations, as well as along the elevated lines and in the central points of the subway.

BUSINESS MEN HELP.

Among the schools and organizations where clubs have been formed are: Burdett College, Boston University, Bryant & Stratton, Fisher's College, Emerson College, Simmons College, Conservatory of Music and Radcliffe College. Vincent Club, the Junior League Girls, the Chilton Club, the Copley Business Institute, the Franklin Square House, the Wendell Club and the Army and Navy Club also are sending workers in the cause.

The Boston business man also is helping. Led by such men as Governor Cox, Mayor Peters, Mayor-Elect Curley, State Treasurer James Jackson, Judge William Day, William G. Prout and Professor Harold Whitehead, they are organized today into "Good Sport Clubs," designed to show the men who did the fighting "over there" that the men who stayed at home "over here" are good sports also.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Debutantes Showing Interest in the First Number of 'The Calendar'

Mrs. L. Manlius Sargent Jr. (Elizabeth Williams) of Middlesex road, Chestnut Hill, is a prominent member of the young married set. Her wedding, which was solemnized in St. Paul's Church, Dedham, was one of the important nuptial events of the early Fall season. Mrs. Sargent is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lombard Williams of Dedham.

MRS. MANLIUS SARGENT, JR.

By BETTY ALDEN.

IN just a few days the debbies of Boston, New York and Washington will know just what their sister-debs in Baltimore and Philadelphia are doing. This is to be accomplished by "The Calendar," the first number of which will appear shortly. This magazine, published by the Debutante Association, will chronicle the comings, goings and doings of the "just-out" contingent of these various cities.

I was not surprised to hear that "The Calendar" is to be sold only on subscription. Evidently the buds see no reason why the "rank outsider" should be permitted to concern him-or her-self with matters which pertain to the buds alone. The proceeds of this periodical, by the way, will go to charity. The opening issue, I understand, is to contain sketches by Miss Emily Billings of New York, as well as artistic contributions by other debutantes. Also, George Gordon Battle has written an article for the first number. Needless to say, there has been quite some little chatter over the ten cups in regard to the "Calendar's" first issue; everyone is wondering just what it is going to be like.

The committee having charge of its publication includes Mrs. Rodney Williams, Mrs. Robert Porter Patterson, Miss Diana Dalziel, Miss Wanden Matthews. Miss Emily Billings, Miss Alice Mann of Washington and Miss Roberta Castleman. Miss Anne Gordon Winchester is chairman of the Calendar Magazine and secretary and treasurer of the Debutante Association.

Anne Winchester, by the way, is the sister-in-law-to-be of Miss Lilian Aldrich of Boston, whose engagement to John Gordon Winchester was announced last Summer. The betrothal of Miss Aldrich to young Winchester, who is a student at Harvard, added to the already long list of Boston-Harvard-New York romances. Miss Aldrich, a member of the 1919-20 Sewing Circle, is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Frost of Beacon street and Dublin, N. H., whose name is inscribed upon the membership scroll of the Mayflower Club.

But speaking again of Miss Winchester, she was a member of the committee in charge of the second Thursday evening supper dance held on this week in the Crystal room of the Ritz-Carlton.

A corps of distinguished names are to be found upon the patronesses' list for the Naval Ball to be given in the Cadet Armory, Columbus avenue and Arlington street, next Thursday evening. The committee in charge of the ball, which is in aid of the Scollay Square Service Club, includes Mrs. Frederick H. Tappan, Miss Margery Bouve and Miss Frances R. Porter.

Of those who have lent their names to the affair are Mesdames Edward J. Holmes, Charles Fiske, Jr., Edward C. Wheeler, Jr., John Chipman Gray, Edward H. Grew, R. Parker Brenner, Robert Emmons, Richard Wheatland, Henry P. King, Charles E. Mason, Charles H. Mason, Charles H. Parker, John E. Thayer, Robert Treat Paine, 2d., M. A. DeWolfe Howe, Sullivan Sargent, Alexander S. Porter, Jr., Edward Farnham Greene, Albert Thorndike, Channing H. Cox, Walter C. Baylies, Francis L. Higginson, Clarence Edwards, Ronald T. Lyman, Augustus Thorndike, J. Harleston Parker, Francis W. Lee; also the Misses Dorothy Forbes and Rose L. Dexter.

The first of the State functions, dinners and evening receptions which make up the formal social program at the White House, was given on Thursday evening, when the President and Mrs. Harding entertained sixty guests at what is usually described as the Cabinet Dinner.

The entire company assembled in the Blue Room shortly before 8 o'clock, when the President and his wife entered this apartment and greeted the guests, Colonel Clarence O. Sherrill, U. S. A., chief of the military aids on duty at the White House, attending the hosts and presenting each guest by name.

The company included, in addition to the hosts, the Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes, the Secretary of the Treasury and Miss Mellon, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Weeks, the Attorney-General, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Denby, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Hoover, the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Davis, Senator and Mrs. Irvine L. Lenroot, Senator and Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps, Senator and Mrs. Coleman du Pont, General John J. Pershing, Representative C. Bascom Slemp, Representative and Mrs. Samuel Winslow, Representative Joseph G. Cannon and Miss Cannon, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the secretary to the President and Mrs. Christian, and Mrs. Eugene Hale.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Strauss, Mrs. J. G. Batelle, Mrs. James C. Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, Chandler Hale, Bishop John W. Hamilton, Miss Laura Harlan, Commander and Mrs. R. S. Holmes, Charles B. Kling, Miss Patten, Mr. and Mrs. William McC. Ritter, Colonel and Mrs. Clarence O. Sherrill and Mr. and Mrs. William Boyce Thompson.

MRS. CATHERINE STACK'S FUNERAL AT YDE PARK

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Stack of Hyde Park was held today, with a high mass of requiem in the Church of the Most Precious Blood. Mrs. Stack's funeral was held from her late home, No. 10 Wilton street. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Catherine Stevens of Mattapan, Mrs. Harry Day of Braintree, Miss Nora Stack and four sons, Dr. Charles F., a physician; Matthew H., Dr. Thomas P., a dentist, and Frank C. Stack, all of Hyde Park.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and Country

MRS. TEN EYCK WENDELL (May Dwight Foote), who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Edward Foote, at the latter's home on Beacon street, has returned to her home in New York. Mrs. Wendell lives at No. 22 West 51st street.

Mrs. Payne Whitney of New York has engaged the entire second floor of the Hotel Plaza for the dance which she is to give next Tuesday evening for her debutante daughter, Miss Joan Whitney. One thousand guests have been invited to the ball at which supper will be served in the new dining room. Among the Boston debutantes going on to Gotham for this brilliant event are the Misses Peggy Porter, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. Porter of Beacon street, and Helen Scott, daughter of the Hugh Scotts of Wellesley.

Mr. and Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, Jr. (Louise Converse), have returned to their home, No. 30 East Thirty-sixth street, from Glen Cove, L. I. Mrs. Morgan, Jr., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Converse of West Cedar street, Boston.

Members of the Harvard class of '21 will be interested to learn of the marriage of one of the classmates, Dr. John Campbell Howard, of New York, to Miss Margaret Loizeaux of Plainfield, N. J. The wedding took place Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Loizeaux. The groom, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Howard of New York, served as a major in the Medical Corps during the war. The couple will make their home at No. 301 West 107th street, New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Baylies (Beatrice Ballard) are making their home at No. 5 Gloucester street in this city for the season. Last Winter the Baylies were at No. 1190 Madison avenue, New York. Mr. Baylies is a member of the Somerset and Harvard Clubs of Boston.

WILLIAM A. WARD TO WED NEW YORK GIRL

Friends of William A. Ward, formerly of No. 24 Heath street, Somerville, and former Boston American photo-engraver, were surprised today when they received word that he would be married in New York tomorrow. The bride-to-be is Miss Dorothy Lange of New York. Louis Cerezola and his wife will attend the couple. Ward, who is well known in Boston, is employed by the Knapp Engraving Company, of New York.

WOMAN ENTERS SLANDER SUIT FOR $200,000

Ex-Actress Accuses Prominent Persons of Maligning Her on on "Poppy Day"

New York, Dec. 17.—Accusing several prominent men and a woman representative of Mme. Millerand, wife of the President of France, of slander, Mrs. Marion McAllister Smith, formerly Miss Mercedes Leigh, a prominent actress, has filed papers in the Supreme Court of New York County in an action for $200,000 damages.

The defendants are Maurice Leon, lawyer, writer on international topics and representative of the French government during the war; George W. Burleigh, a lawyer and a member of the firm of Delafield, Thorne & Burleigh; Barry N. Smith, who was head of the National Information Bureau; Bronson Batchelor, of a publicity agency; Roger B. Jenkins, an officer of the agency; Mme. Anne E. Guerin, representative in the United States of Mme. Millerand, and the Right Hev. Herbert Shipman, suffragan bishop of New York.

Differences growing out of the observance of "Poppy Day" last Spring, which was designed to raise more than $1,000,000 for the destitute war orphans of France, is behind the suit. FINDS CHRISTIAN SCIENCE WORK CONSTRUCTIVE

Braithwaite Says It Offers Truth About God and Man in Plain Form

John Sidney Braithwaite of London, member of the board of lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, delivered a lecture on Christian Science at the Mother Church.

"You will sometimes hear it said," he stated, "that Christian Scientists deny the divinity of the Christ, but surely it would be hard to find a statement further from the truth than that. Jesus revealed to men the divinity or godlikeness of the true idea of man, and that was His divinity, because He lived it and proved it in His daily life, and so it will be our divinity when we live it and prove it in ours.

"And when we do begin to grasp and apply this spiritual idea of man which Jesus presented—so different from that material concept of man, which the senses are all the time offering to us—not only to our thought about ourselves, but to our thoughts about all with whom we are daily and hourly thrown in contact, a great change begins to take place in our lives. That dark cloud of fear, envy, criticism which casts such a shadow begins to break, and a new, more radiant outlook begins to dawn.

"That is why work in Christian Science is the most constructive form of mental activity, because Christian Science is offering to us the truth about God and man in a form that we can both understand and demonstrate."

3,000 Parcels of Food, Each to Contain a Jar of Vegex Preparation

Three thousand one-ounce jars of Vegex, valued at $450, have been contributed without cost to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, which is to provide free Christmas dinners for at least 22,000 persons. One jar will be placed in each of the first 3,000 parcels of food assembled for the Christmas Fund.

This fine contribution is the result of a recent meeting of the board of directors of Marmite Incorporated of America, at the executive offices, No. 218 Milk street, Boston. The directors voted unanimously to make this contribution for the American's Christmas parcels.

GLAD TO ASSIST.

In writing to the Christmas Fund editor relative to the contribution, Curtis F. Freshel, executive officer of the board of directors, said:

"Inasmuch as the first symptoms of a restricted diet occur as a result of a deficiency of the water soluble B vitamine, in which Vegex is so rich, we feel that our preparation will be a valuable addition to your baskets, for as you know, Vegex is not only uniquely rich in vitamine content, but is a culinary article of homeliness in the making of soups, gravies, sauces, sandwiches, etc.

"Vegex not only played an important role in the rations of the British army during the great war, but was supplied to all the prison camps in Germany for the purpose of protecting the health of the allied prisoners against the scourges brought about as a result of the deficiency of this essential vitamine factor and since the Armistice it has been used extensively on the Continent wherever the civilian population has been forced, through circumstances, to subsist on a restricted diet. The foremost scientists of the world bear testimony to the great number of lives which have been saved in consequence.

"It is a splendid thing for the Boston American to undertake this work, particularly at this time of year—and we are pleased with the opportunity of assisting."

This is one of the largest contributions ever made to the Boston American Christmas Fund since its inauguration eight years ago. The jars of Vegex will be a valuable addition to the Christmas parcels, especially for the more delicate members of the families into whose homes the parcels will go. An excellent bouillon is made from this substance.

Among the persons who are giving out-standing aid to the Fund are, Captain Daniel Sheridan, Master J. Myllett and John Elwell.

Members of the Durant Women's Club will conduct a tag day on next Wednesday in aid of the Boston American's Fund. In addition they will hold a rally in Roger's building, Boylston street, Wednesday evening, for the purpose of stimulating the membership of the organization, and, incidentally, will take a collection for Boston American's Fund. The Morse-Brackett Company, No. 144 High street, contributed $150 in cash and stock to the Fund, through the kindness of President A. J. Gallagher.

Three exceptionally good films will be shown through the kindness of S. Y. Conrad, president of the Federated Film Exchange.

Persons who have not already purchased tickets for the big charity ball and entertainment in Copley-Plaza Hotel Monday night, in aid of the fund, under the direction of the Ame Ba Burnham Studio of Dancing, may secure them by calling at the studio, No. 240 Huntington avenue, or at the door on the Copley-Plaza entrance Monday evening. Among the outsiders who are assisting in making the party a success are T. K. Cory, John Connell & Co., Durkee Lingerie Shop, Simpson's Flower Shop, Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company, Miriam Goldman, Lillian Duncan, Arlington Chemical and the Boston Flower Market.

U. S. Consumes More Opium Than Europe, Webber Says

Abraham C. Webber, formerly Assistant District Attorney of Suffolk County and generally recognized as one of the best authorities on the illicit drug traffic, has written a series of articles for the Boston American dealing with the scope and dangers of the evil.

Mr. Webber is one of the younger lawyers before the Massachusetts bar because of his ability and knowledge of the subject, he was appointed to serve on a special drug commission created by the Massachusetts Legislature in 1916, with Dr. Frank G. Wheatley, chairman, and Hermann C. Lythgoe, director Division Food and Drugs, State Department of Health.

ABRAHAM C. WEBBER

By ABRAHAM C. WEBBER

From 13 to 72 per cent. more opium is consumed per capita in the United States than is used in Europe, according to Federal statistics. That is something for the country to ponder over. It is an astonishing fact.

Statistics show that Germany and France each use 17,000 pounds of opium annually; Italy, 6,000 pounds; Australia, 3,000 pounds; Holland, 3,000 pounds; Portugal, 2,000 pounds, and the United States the alarming and shameful total of 47,000.

In fact, since these statistics were compiled, the total consumption of opium in the country has increased to more than 500,000 pounds annually.

And the 47,000 or 500,000 pounds of opium officially reported as consumed each year in the United States does not include the large amount smuggled into the country every year.

RAW OPIUM CAUSES EVIL.

It is safe to say that about 90 per cent. of all these drugs is not used for medicinal purposes. While England is charged with being responsible for over-production of opium and allowing a large supply to enter the channels of illicit traffic in this and other countries, let us not be blind to our own negligence in this matter.

We are turning loose through our manufacturing chemists many times the quantity of morphine sulphate and other habit-forming drugs honestly needed for medicinal purposes. Opium in the raw is only indirectly the cause of the trouble. Opium must be manufactured into morphine sulphate before the addict can use it through his hypodermic needle.

Unrestrained manufacturing of morphine and cocaine, carried on with the knowledge and acquiescence of our government makes it possible for the addict to secure his supply.

In addition to the injury caused to our own citizens, we are charged with drenching China with American manufactured morphine, making the situation in China, painfully trying to break away from opium slavery that has in time past ruined its people, exceedingly difficult.

Can anyone advance a single reason why our government through some commission should not immediately establish the reasonable quantity necessary for legitimate medical purposes, and compel our manufacturing chemists who are all registered and have only by license, to cut down their production accordingly? It is necessary to argue this opinion to such an extent as to force this action, pray let us do this at once. Why delay?

Of what use is it to expect our local authorities to stamp out the drug evil when the licensed manufacturing chemists of this country are pouring out a torrent of poisonous drugs under the very eyes of our government?

Why vent all our spleen against the smuggler and illicit peddler of drugs when it may develop after investigation, that the regular source of supply are doing a good deal of the damage?

23 P. C. LEGITIMATELY USED.

Government reports admit that an average of over 1,000,000 pounds of cocaine leaves are imported yearly into this country, which furnishes in a manufactured state about 150,000 ounces of cocaine salts. Only 25 per cent. of this at most is used in legitimate medical or dental practice.

In spite of the fact that it is admitted that almost all of this is used for illicit purposes, and that the remainder may be wholly dispensed with, as I have shown in a previous article, not a single attempt is being made to control this source of supply.

As a delegate, representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I had the pleasure of meeting the heads of the drug trade at the National Drug Trade Conference at Washington, in 1917. I found as honest and patriotic men as one could meet. I am sure that they would render the government every assistance to do the right thing. As usual, however, somebody must start the process.

SERVICES FOR Y. D. HERO WILL BE HELD SUNDAY

The funeral of Corporal Morris Kaufmann, son of Mrs. Dora Kaufmann of No. 26 Grove street, Chelsea, and who was killed in action on October 4, 1918, while serving with the 101st Infantry of the 26th Division, near Romagne, France, will be held from the State Armory, Chelsea, at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Burial will be at the Sharon Memorial Cemetery, Waban, with Rabbi Philip Israel's officiating. Chelsea Post, American Legion, will be in charge of the services.

FOREIGN SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED B. U. STUDENTS

The faculty of the Boston University School of Theology have granted fellowships to Earl Bowman Merlatt of Kenosha, Wis., and Dewey Jackson Short of Galena, Mo., two third year students. The Jewish Shorter Fellowship was granted Merlatt while Short was elected the Frank D. Howard Fellow. These fellowships entitle the holder to one or two years' study abroad at the conclusion of their four years' work.

RIVAL STEAMER LINES FIGHTING FOR PATRONAGE

"Steerage" a Word Not Now Heard in the Big Shipping Offices

New York, Dec. 17. (By the Associated Press.)—Rival steamship lines are competing for passengers in the post-war travel revival, as sharply as bonds sold for gamers.

In the old days, this competition showed itself chiefly in innovations intended to please first class passengers, but now interest is centering also on second and third class quarters.

A Hamburg line recently announced a "dining car" for second class passengers, and presently an American line began supplying menu cards for the third class.

These and all the old-fashioned word "steerage" no longer is heard in shipping offices, in practically all the larger ships the third class today is as luxurious as the first class of twenty-five years ago. Even ships exclusively for steerage are often decorated only with oilcloth or not at all —and with them self-service.

But competition also is keen in the first class saloon. Innovations recently announced by various lines include:

A captain's hour with the children.

Cabin-to-cabin telephone service.

A miniature department store.

A bureau for engaging table by wireless.

An electric "shimmy" machine."

replacing the promenade as a weight reducer.

A woman barber for bobbed heads.

An addict, twenty-five years of age, was before Municipal Court a few days ago, charged with having in his possession many hypodermic needles, the syringe and a deck of cocaine, containing 15 grains, which was unwrapped according to "Jack." Those days.

He was caught in a South End lodging house and was well known to the police.

The prisoner admitted that he has spent as high as $20 a day to satisfy his craving for his favorite dope. Said he:

"A user has to have a shot about 6 every morning in order to go to work. Workers feel there is no work out it. Peddlers are mostly foreigners and thieves. But the girls are more swift and large. Just now the stuff is coming from Mexico and England. Women and girls of low grade morals are used by the peddlers to hang around dance halls and pick up customers, chiefly girls.

"Dope fiends are numerous seldom sell. They pass the word around when meets are to be held. Wholesalers get their drugs from Asia Minor. Chinese are smuggling loads of dope from Hong Kong. Merchants pay $70 an ounce, sell it to the peddlers for $100 an ounce and the retailers get from $150 to $250 an ounce for it and often much more."

13 Indicted by Federal Jury for Drug Violations

Federal indictments for violation of the Harrison Narcotic Drug Act, the largest number to be returned by the Federal Grand Jury for months, were reported to Judge Dutton of the Federal Court.

Among those indicted is David W. Deshler, former well-known light weight boxer, who is accused of possessing narcotics.

Besides Deshler, the following were indicted: Jacob Rosenberg and Eli A. Smith, druggist, of Boston, sale of narcotic drugs and aiding and abetting in the sale; Abraham Rosenstein, Malvesin H. Foote, possession of narcotic drugs; Alexander Pallazzo and William Manna, possession of narcotic drugs and aiding and abetting; Simon Gerson, Morris Fladell, Anthony Carosia, Ralph Amore, selling narcotic drugs; Zach Bettane, Salvatore Guiffre, Nicholas Abate and Frank Abate, selling drugs and aiding and abetting.

Dr. Ralph C. Fish of Worcester was indicted on the charge of failing to keep record of narcotic drugs he dispensed.

Back Bay Couple Held on Drug Charge After Raid

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Hizzo were arrested in their apartment on St. Botolph street, Back Bay, by Inspectors Finn, Flaherty and Dorsey on charges of illegally having morphine in their possession. The Hizzos' explanation to have found a bottle and a box of the "dope" in the living room. Hizzo, who is a thirty-year-old salesman, is said by police to be out on $1,000 bail on a charge he was brought against him in the Federal Court.

PRAISES CHEVROLET CAR AFTER STRENUOUS TRIP

W. C. Sills, president of the Sills-Chevrolet Company, recently completed a tour around his New England territory and just beat the snowstorm in. He made the trip in a Chevrolet "F. B." Sedan.

"Of course, it is only natural that I should be enthusiastic over the Chevrolet," said Sills, "but it is a fact that this car is exceptionally well suited, at the same time wonderfully economical.

"I have driven many cars and must confess that the riding qualities of this car are astonishing. On the trip such as I have just made over country roads, roughened by frost and snow, is a test for any car and the Chevrolet is ready to make the test. It is a good car and the 'Sills-Service-Satisfaction' stands behind it."

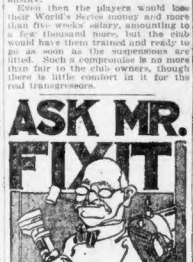
LANDIS LIKELY TO MODIFY RUTH ORDER

May Allow Babe, Meusel and Piercy to Accompany Yankees on Spring Trip

New York, Dec. 17.—Before Judge Landis issues the official order barring Babe Ruth, Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy from participating in championship games with the Yankees until after May 7 of next year he probably will modify it to permit the "Three Musketeers" to accompany the team on the Spring training trip and to take part in exhibition games before the regular season opens.

An arrangement of this sort will greatly relieve the present situation, which is causing some embarrassment. While the owners of the New York club assure Landis of their support in this case, they are facing a heavy loss, which may be greatly lessened if the judge will consent to a Spring arrangement.

Even then the players would lose their World Series money and more than five weeks' salary, amounting to a few thousand more, but the club would have them trained and ready to go as soon as the suspensions are lifted. Such a compromise is no more than fair to the club owners, though there is little comfort in it for the real transgressors.



Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1921 Ford tour-ing car which I just bought and paid cash for. It was O. K. until about a week ago, when I noticed in going over the electrical system by hand-cranking it was a frayed wire hanging from the dash. I fixed it up and thought nothing more about it until I jumped on a rear wheel and jumped back on the starting crank, and took off the starter and transmission housing. I was doing all right, released the crank and the engine could be open with ease. But when I put the hand brake on, the engine would not turn. With the brake off the engine would turn with ease. Can you explain? C. A.

Answer—First trouble when you could not start your car was because the Bendix drive gear on the starter stuck in gear for the time. This sometimes happens and the way to get it out is to put your car in high speed on the starter crank and try to rock the motor back and forth. This will release the gear. Then turn the engine over by hand, rocking the car. Your fresh. It comes from the fact that when you took your transmission down you did not assemble it properly and your gear is locked in high speed. Try it carefully to see that when the brake is off, it is in neutral position, the high speed clutch is thrown out.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Would you please tell me the battery I require for a Dodge touring car, number and battery I require for 40-horse power Packard touring car, and where can I get them? Also tell me what is the cost of them.

Atlantic, Mass.

Answer—Any starter on the market would be alright for this car. Get in touch with the Dodge Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich., and explain Marquette car. They have changed the starter several times in 1921 or 1922. They were built by the Dodge Motor Car Co., and might be able to get further information by writing to the Dodge Bros. Co., at Detroit, Mich.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a Ford coupe and would like to know if it would be O. K. to put a universal joint in the rear axle of the coupe and stop for about two hours and don't like to make water off all the time. R. F.

Milford, Mass.

Answer—I do not recommend the use of kerosene to cool a Ford car. Use denatured alcohol, mixed 60 per cent. alcohol in your solution. This will stand weather down to 10 degrees below zero. By putting a universal joint on your car this enable to take care of you in very cold weather.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a model D-45 Buick. Will you please tell me in detail how to set the intake valves on the car? C. H. Winthrop, Mass.

Answer—Explain more fully just what you want to do.

If W. B. Woonsocket, R. I., will write to Fix-It, care of the Boston American, Mass., he may purchase a 1916 Maxim Silent Motor.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1917 Ford tourer car which sometimes like a little information. Would you please tell me what causes it to pound? It sounds like the rubbing of two pieces of sandpaper together. Sometimes like the clutch is slipping. When there are three or four people in the car it makes a terrible noise, but I always hear that grinding noise and pounding. Will be glad to have you help me out on the three points that concerns the riddle of the Ford. Also, I have a Ford truck and the motor stalls. I would like to know if you could give me a little information. Thanking you in advance. Yours truly, H. F. Hyde.

Answer—Your trouble sounds like a slipping clutch and would advise trying to get new clutch facings and see if that will help you. You may have to put on a new clutch spring. The best way to set your valves is to have the intake open at the top dead centre and the exhaust valves close at the top of the end centre. The best way to set your valves and forget about your spring of valves, if valve stem is longer than the other it will change the timing of the valves, so it will cause it to open more quickly and close more quickly.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—How can I tell whether a Buick Little Six number is a 1920 model or not?

Please let us have the motor number of this car as it would be pretty hard to tell from the years between 1919 and 1920 and late 1920.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Will you please advise me if a cylinder block for a 1914-15 Metz would fit a 1916 Metz? Thanking you in advance for this information, I remain, Yours very truly, W. P. B.

Beachmont, Mass.

The block would not fit. The cylinders would be too small.

Says One Country Postmaster Wanted Two-Cent Stamps Printed in Orange, So They'd Match His Wall Paper

Postmaster-General Hays says that people who live in the country must put their rural delivery mail boxes near the road, so the postman can put your bills in them without leaving his buggy.

Very few of these postmen are lazy, but one guy made application for mail carrier in a village where nobody lived but hermits.

He said he didn't care how many letters he had to go out and deliver as long as the people came and called for them.

He said he'd take the job in spite of the fact that he had to furnish his own carriage. If he had a horse he could use a horse and buggy if he had a buggy.

He's like Edison, he's always thinking. He's trying to think of some way to deliver the mail without getting out of bed.

A special delivery stamp requires extra speed, but his horse can't go faster than it always does, but whichever you pay a dime extra for a stamp he'l whip the horse.

He'll deliver the letter the same day it comes in, if it takes him three days to do it.

He never heard about Frank Bacon, but he thinks Benjamin Franklin wrote "Lightnin'."

He told Mr. Hays that he was used to working in a one-horse town, but he moved out when they got another horse.

He lost all his money and he wanted a job as mail carrier so he could get on his feet again.

He said he was O. K. physically but he wanted the job so he could get a new glass eye and another pair of shoes.

Crutches wouldn't help the delivery of the letters any, because, even if he could walk, he can't read.

He has about as much chance of getting a job in the postmaster as a doctor has of opening a health resort next to a cemetery.

He's so dumb he thought postage was a substitute for coffee.

He wanted the Postoffice Department to make two-cent stamps orange so they'd match his wall paper.

He was so sure he wasn't going to get the job that when he sent in his application he put a P. S. at the bottom, resigning.

SPORTS HUSTLE TO AID THE CHRISTMAS FUND

The Sports Department section of the Boston American's Christmas Basket Fund continues to surge merrily forward. The fund will close in five days more, so if you have not already kicked in with your contribution, DO IT NOW, as Mark Twain would say.

A whole lot of kids are going to be without dollars on Christmas Day unless the generosity of the sporting profession dig deep into their jeans and separate themselves from part of their reserve.

The followers of sports have got into the habit of giving liberally to every kind of a worthy cause. Perhaps that's why more of them have not got great wealth.

* * *

There is more real joy, however, in helping to buy dinners for a lot of hungry kids than there is in looking at bank book balances. So, everybody up and get in on the Christmas basket fund before the polls close.

* * *

Two of Eddie Mack's fighters, each, gave a ten spot to the fund. We refer to Johnny Clinton, New England lightweight champion, and Willie Harmon, Mack's latest sensation. As Abe Attell previously gave his mite, it looks as though the Mack stable is very much up and coming. Eddie himself was one of the first under the wire, as known.

Then Young Montreal of Providence came through with a ten spot. And Tommy Fisher and true sportsman in his own right, is also gave a ten spot.

Al Belmont, who manages Young Rainbow and a flock of other high grade fighters, has giving wave and handed $5 over for this fund. Tommy Dupre came through with a five spot, as did Native Bonin, Connie Lepis, Lucky Lou Casabuan, Bobby Buckle, Joe Geary, the Gustin Club and Steve Gustin.

* * *

Stonewall Jackson kicked in with $2. He gives to everything May he prosper.

* * *

The Sporting Editor, who has five kids of his own, realizes the many calls made on one during the Christmas holidays. Yet he feels that a whole lot of persons connected with sports could give a little something to this wonderful cause if they desire to make a little effort.

Don't delay!

Do it now!

Send contributions to John B. Gillooly, Sporting Editor, No. 60 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

SUDBURYS LOSE "IN THE BAG" HOCKEY GAME

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Accusations of "in the bag" swept about the Boston Arena last night, when the Sudbury "Wolves" took a 3 to 1 defeat at the hands of the Westminster Hockey Club of this city.

Whether the game was "framed" is a matter that would be difficult to prove, but there was no doubt that the Sudbury team displayed far less ability than was the case the previous evening, when they so soundly defeated the Pere Marquette sextet.

So brilliant had been the exhibition of the Canadians against the fast trained team that betting odds on the Sudbury - Westminster contest were quoted at 2 to 1 and then 10 to 8 on the Sudbury team.

On Thursday night the combination work of the visiting array was of a quality seldom seen on the local rink, on Thursday night the Sudbury defence loomed as a stonewall, and but twice in the contest were Pere Marquette players able to penetrate it, on Thursday night the individual skill of Green, the Sudbury centre ice man, drew round after round of applause. But last night Sudbury's play as a team and as individuals was of a vastly different quality.

Combination play was decidedly lacking; the Sudbury defence was repeatedly overcome or outgeneraled; Green gave the audience just one thrill and that came in the last minute of play when the game was already cinched by the Westminsters. Sudbury failed to check back with any display of earnestness, Sudbury kept three men playing on the defence despite the fact Westminster had gained a two-point lead; Sudbury's listlessness was the subject of all who had witnessed Sudbury's brilliance on the night previous. And the big question is "Why?"

If you can explain this, Sudbury faced in the Westminsters a much better ordered attack and defence than they faced in the Pere Marquette game, but few could conceive a difference of more than ten points in the Pere Marquette and Westminster teams, as is indicated in their respective scores against Sudbury.

The fact, too, that not only the Sudbury coach but the Westminster coach, served as referees in the game, did not help to clear the odor of the game, although it must be said the officiating had nothing to do with the outcome of the contest.

Many local hockey followers, however, will await Sudbury's display against the B. A. A. in tonight's contest before passing judgment on last night's play, and if the Canadians should display a return to the form they exhibited in the Pere Marquette game, it will be difficult to shake the "in the bag" idea from such fee enthusiasts, and local hockey will be given a rather sad blow.

Little of a favorable nature can be said of the Sudbury play of last night, except that of McCann, the goal tender, who in the course of the evening made a number of brilliant stops.

The Westminsters took turns in starring against this lackadaisical opposition. Shorty Veno and Frankie Downing led the locals' attack, while Soay and Irving Smith occasionally featured in brilliant rushes. The last named and Smith performed especially on the outer defence while Rennee's work in goal proved by far the cleverest yet shown this season. Veno, on a pass from Downing, tallied the first counter for the Westminsters after eight minutes of play in the opening period. Six minutes later, Shay, on a solo effort counted the second for Westminster.

GOLFERS DIVIDE NEW YORK AND CALIFORNIA

Group Other States and With Individual States Form 20 Sectional Bodies

New York, Dec. 17.—The national executive committee of the Professional Golfers' Association closed its two-day semi-annual meeting in this city for the sectional bodies now being formed.

The States of Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas will each constitute one section.

The others are either grouped or divided

The groups are: New England, Northern Pacific slope; Western Pennsylvania, with West Virginia; Kentucky and Tennessee; Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi; Georgia and the Carolinas; Nebraska, Colorado and Utah; Texas, New Mexico and Arizona; Eastern Pennsylvania, with Delaware, Maryland and Virginia

Northern and Southern California are divided, also New York, into the Metropolitan and Northern districts.

The date of the national open championship at Chicago, July 11, was approved.

It was voted to request Britain to move their open fixture forward a month, beginning 1923, in order to allow the National's open to be held in late June. Offers of co-operation with the Western Association for holding a course each year will be considered.

Hereafter, it was decided $4 should qualify for the Professional Golfers' Association event, instead of $2. Accordingly the first two rounds will be cut to 18 holes each

TENDLER BEATS FRIEDMAN IN 15 ROUNDS

New York, Dec. 17.—Lew Tendler, the southpaw from Philadelphia, received the decision over Sailor Friedman in their 15-round battle last night at Madison Square Garden. The fight started off in a most sensational manner, but flivvered towards the finish. In the second round Tendler showed like a champion. He flopped Friedman to the canvas four times, and it looked a dollar to a dime that the sailor would surely take a sudden exit.

He bounded from the floor in a black manner, taking plenty of time on all counts. By this smart work the sailor withstood the onslaught and lasted the limit.

In the fight went along Tendler seemed to lose his power. The sailor grew braver as the fight progressed, while Tendler was faster and cleverer. The sailor wasn't one bit afraid

Tendler weighed 135¼ pounds, while Friedman scaled close to the mark at 136 pounds. As far as Leonard's crown is in jeopardy, how do you spell that word.

VETERAN PLAYERS SIGN WITH SOUTHERN CLUBS

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 17.—Odell Street, veteran catcher, and George McQuillan, former major league pitcher, will be on the roster of Southern Association clubs next season, Street with Little Rock and McQuillan with New Orleans, according to announcements at the Southern Association meeting.

DOYLE'S PUNCH TOO MUCH FOR HEAVYWEIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

Weight alone is not what enables a fighter to knock out an opponent. Little men are often able to hit much harder than some of the big huskies who think they are contenders for Jack Dempsey's title. Paul Doyle, who battles Eddie Shevlin at the Armody A. A.'s show next Tuesday night, proved this theory to be correct when he made a squad of hefty hitters look like novices in a test in a New York gymnasium the other day.

Doyle was tackling [illegible] with Shevlin and was punching away at an apparatus which registered the power of each blow.

"A sharp, snappy punch has more effect than a full swing," said Doyle.

"I'll bet you a perfectly good hat that I can register as much as [illegible] can [illegible] short back."

The heavyweight scaled frightfully as he looked at Doyle's slight figure and graceful lines.

"Don't think you are the whole works because Jack Britton won't meet you," replied the big fighter. "As I need a new hat, I'll take you up on your bet. I'll teach you to mind your own business in future."

* * *

The fans gathered around the registering machine. The heavyweight pulled back his mighty right until it rested near his ankle. He then pulled back his body. Next he lurched forward and whipped his right in the direction of the registering machine. His gloved hand crashed against the machine and the indicator shot up until it neared the eighty mark.

"Beat that kid, if you can," snarled the big fellow.

* * *

Doyle stepped back a few feet, then leaned forward like a gunner and let loose a short, cutting punch. The blow only traveled six inches before it hit the machine.

"Ninety-five," shouted the crowd.

"I'll be $15 hats," was Doyle's comment as he looked in the direction of his vanquished foe.

* * *

Several middleweights then took shots at the machine, but none of them could equal Doyle's mark.

As we listened to this story, it recalled to our memory Doyle's great fight with K. O. Loughlin at the Arena last Summer. Loughlin is one of the hardest hitting welterweights in the world. He is one of the few men Jack Britton and Eddie Shevlin have never been able to meet.

Loughlin dared Doyle with a heavy blow over the heart in the second round. Then came the third frame. Doyle was fighting on the defensive. Loughlin was trying desperately to score with a haymaker. Suddenly Doyle leaped forward, whipped a short right to his opponent's jaw and was winner by a knockout.

* * *

Doyle, like Jack Dempsey, contends that a short punch is always the most effective. There is less chance of missing with it than if one swings from the floor. It also has more power if properly delivered. When Charley White was knocking out all opposition his socks seldom travelled more than six inches.

* * *

Doyle plans to punch short and hard in his contest with Shevlin on Tuesday night. He is confident he will break down the Roxbury man's defence and score with the big punch.

"Shevlin can't take a heavy wallop on the jaw," said Tony Palazolo, leading Remember the night Shevlin knocked out Mickey Dunn? The Roxbury boy would have scored a knockout on that occasion if he had not lacked experience.

"In the second round he dazed Shevlin with a right hand punch to the jaw. Eddie fell into a clinch and held on for dear life. Dunman didn't know enough about the fine points of the game to throw Shevlin off and count with another solid right to the jaw. If Doyle ever gets Shevlin in a dazed condition, it will be curtains for the Roxbury kid."

* * *

Secretary Ivy Lewis reports a big demand for reservations at the Armory Club's office, No. 61 Court street. The fact that there will be popular assessment has added interest to the match.

The Riverton A A will stage an amateur boxing show at the Chelsea Theatre tonight. A large number of entries have been received for the various classes and some high-up battles are expected. The Riverton A. A. has already staged a number of highly successful amateur shows.

With the main event settled Promoter Toohey will now turn his attention to arranging the preliminaries for the holiday carnival.

GIBBONS WINNER OVER RIVAL MIKE O'DOWD

St. Paul Minn., Dec. 17.—Mike Gibbons proved to the world that his retirement from the ring did not result in his demise as a fighter. The redoubtable "Phantom" defeated Mike O'Dowd in ten rounds, in the opinion of newspapermen at the ringside.

The fight was the first meeting of Gibbons and O'Dowd since Mike defeated O'Dowd two years ago.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER

An Engrossing Film Drama, Based on One of FANNIE HURST'S Unique Stories of New York's East Side

The Progress of the Story Up to Date

Essie Birdsong, a lovely flower of the East Side, is compelled to spend her days in the dull, unwholesome factory by her brother Louis Bergquist, a gambler. She is kept to her by her failing health in spite of the conditions in which she spends her hours because of the extra money and the chance of fresh air she gets going in and from her work. These conditions are as bad spiritually as they are physically, and Jimmie sees the necessity of keeping watch for his sister's good. Essie seeks a job and becomes acquainted with Lou Perez, an usher at a theatre, who contrives to dance and otherwise cavil on her $8 a week. He gets Essie a similar position where she sees Joe Ullman, a ticket speculator, and he entertains her. She, Bird Song, at home, recalls her legacy of $3 000 from her mother and its dwindling gradually until both children were grown up

TIGHT stood in the little side room that connected with the street, and one of the girls who did a turn brushed past Mr. Ullman as he tried to lie himself out of his awkward predicament, while he was flirting with the newcomer.

"I don't ever want to see you again n Joe Ullman," she cried, fired by jealousy and the bitterness of

"Come on now, kid, what's the matter? Just because I forgot to come to dinner. You ought to be

Essie started to walk away.

"Where are you going?"

"Anywhere home, that's where, and you needn't come with us."

"Oh, I like you," said Joe, assuming his most ingratiating manner, "I'll make it up to you all I will do. If you'll go down to a dance hall and have one little dance with me, I'll go anywhere you like and say hello to your mother, if that's what's eating you so hard."

"I don't feel like dancing," said Essie, "and I don't believe you"

"I give you my promise I'll go. Just one dance. Ain't I fair about it?"

"Well, be in half an hour. You'll get a letter one dance—you mean it"

"I sure do," said Joe, slipping his arm through hers and leading her toward the hall a few blocks to the west.

It was cold, and it was slippery, and Essie was clothed after the fashion of the working girls, with thin clothes and thinner shoes. To avoid falling she had to lean heavily on Mr. Ullman. The lights of the dance hall beckoned her in and the warmth and the action brought back the color to her cheeks.

But the one dance was soon over and Joe took refuge at a table and declared he was too tired to move another step.

"You're not coming?" asked the girl.

Putting it Off

"In a minute, in a minute. Say where do you get off to nag a feller like this—I ain't engaged to you, you know."

The music started and he whirled her to her feet, and fox-trotted across the floor. "Joe," said Joe, "you sure are some dancer. Did you know there was a contest on here tonight and a swell prize—a manicure set—how'd you like to try for it?"

Essie declared she had no idea of doing anything of the sort.

"Oh, well," the tempter replied, "I just thought you'd be sure to win it and you could take it home to your mother; some present, too Look, there, the boss is showing it off now."

And in a lull of the music a fat man held up an imitation ivory manicure set, arranged in a gaudy plush case.

Essie looked and fell. "You see," said Joe, "it's too late to go to your place now; you might as well take this home with you. I'll say your Ma will be tickled to death. I'll bet you couldn't buy it for twenty-five dollars."

The rules of the contest were read out; the couple that could dance longest and best in the opinion of the judges, was to receive the trophy.

A Sudden Stop

Certainly Essie danced well in spite of the high heels that made her back ache—up and down, to and fro she whirled over the floor with the agile Joe. One by one couples dropped out until only one other pair remained. "You'll get it, sure," said her partner, and, weary though she was, she danced harder than ever.

It is possible that among the judges was one who knew Joe and cherished no love for him. At any rate he secretly took from his mouth a piece of chewing gum, and rolling it into an insidious ball flipped it under the feet of the young man.

Suddenly Joe stopped in his mad whirl. One of his feet seemed to be glued to the floor as indeed it was. A loud laugh came from the side lines as an usher politely banished the pair from the contest.

And at every step, too, Mr. Ullman's entangled foot seemed reluctant to leave the floor.

"Joe, Joe, what's the matter?" cried Essie.

"Shut up, you little fool, didn't you see that gum? Where was your eyes, to let me step on it—it's all your fault"

Essie was nonplussed. "I didn't see it

But Joe was not to be consoled. He had been made an object of ridicule before a crowded hall and he resented it.

He sat and glowered while the manicure set was awarded to the successful couple. Then he turned on Essie. "I suppose you think I'm going home with you. Well, I'm not. I'm to dead tired."

"But look at the time," pleaded Essie, "It's nearly 2 o'clock."

"Don't make no difference," said Joe. "Call a taxi."

The girl got to her feet and stood looking down at him. "Get up," she said, "or I'll pull you up—you don't have to ask me home, you don't have to see me anywhere; and don't you ever sneak to me again, or I'll have my brother slap your face."

A BABY THAT PREACHED

By WILLIAM A. M'KEEVER

PERCHED upon a pulpit stand before an audience of 1 500 people sat a blue-eyed year-old boy He looked straight into the faces of his throng of admirers as if he were master of them all

Here is the grand ruler of all environments, people," the speaker began. Instead, while presenting the innocent child A sudden burst of applause rang out, and then followed complete silence.

"Except you be converted and become as this little child you can in no wise enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

"Woe unto him that offends one of these little ones. It were better that a millstone were hanged about a neck and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea.

This another sharp shaft of the Scriptures was thrown toward the audience while the speaker challenged. "Who is there here who would employ this child ten years hence in a sweat shop or otherwise enforce his labor for gain?

Who would conduct a joint or a gambling den into which this innocent babe or his youthful brother might enter and there be defiled? Who, directly or indirectly by means of a depraving suggestion or otherwise, would later entice this baby boy to steal, to rob, to destroy?

"Who, by his personal example, or through the growing years of this child, would lead him to take up habits that contaminate the morals and befoul the spiritual vision?"

"Finally," said the pulpit speaker with the child as his living laboratory material, "he demonstrated that while I have been standing before you during the last three-quarters of an hour, there has been born in the world somewhere more than three thousand innocent babies.

"I leave it to the judgment of the members of this audience as spiritual guardians of them all, and particularly of those of your own home community. It is not enough for the parent of the more fresh and blood to rise up to help these little ones, but good citizens all must come to know and love the infantile human nature and must prove themselves at all times in the position of those who would both safeguard and inspire to better deeds every growing boy and girl within their environment

Thus a little child may be made to preach a powerful sermon. Let us

AS soon as the customer upon whom Adelaide was waiting for her departure, Miss Moran followed her statement to find expression.

"Addie, dear!" she exclaimed "I have news for you

Adelaide finished [illegible] in the silk she was folding before answering.

"What is it?"

A Great Chance

"Cheer up" the other woman commanded "You look like a walking funeral! My dear—you are going to sing this very evening at Heyman's restaurant-cabaret place"

"What!"

Adelaide Brown's knees weakened under her and she dropped into a chair, her eyes wide, her breath coming fast

"What do you mean?" she gasped, "You are in fun"

"Fun nothing!" Rose Moran declared with emphasis and I will tell you about it

The girl and Mme. Mme. Adelaide and Mme. O'Brien were waiting breathlessly for an explanation of [illegible]

Rose Moran had a friend who had heard Adelaide as brown sing, in the restaurant [illegible] He knew [illegible]

At Rose's suggestion the man [illegible] Adelaide to Heyman. Heyman had consented to give the girl a chance to sing at his place this evening if a pianist, who accompanied his singers, thought well of her

Adelaide was to stop on her way home this afternoon and "try out" some of her songs with the pianist.

"You can leave her in time to go down home and get some of your pieces," Mme. O'Brien interjected.

"Thank you," Adelaide murmured, as if in a daze

Rose Moran was not to be stopped in her explanation by this [illegible]

"It seems," she continued, "that one of the singers that Heyman had engaged has been taken sick and cannot fill the rest of her engagement with him—so that's where you come in. If you make good he says he'll give you a job for a month, anyway. And, knowing you as I do, I'm real sure that you'll make good all right"

"I [illegible]" Mme. O'Brien added, beamingly.

Adelaide was not a demonstrative person. But she put her hands on Miss Rose Moran's broad shoulders [illegible] a light kiss on the round flushed cheek

"I [illegible] you are" the girl murmured. "I can never thank you as I would like. But—oh—I am so scared!"

"You don't need to thank me and for pity's sake don't let yourself get scared. That's no way to get a job."

"If I can just keep up my courage—Adelaide began, but stopped [illegible] opened and two customers entered. One was a girl at whom Adelaide [illegible] and the other [illegible] Adelaide [illegible] would take one of the rooms to [illegible] with—just anyone else [illegible]

"There is no use in calling attention to my infirmity."

Adelaide Overhears

This words made the girl turn quickly. She had not heard her mother enter her room

"I hope I do look nice," Adelaide smiled. "I wish you would tell Jennie to put the kettle on and make me a cup of tea. I'll starve if I go to it eating place as hungry as I am now. I'm bad enough to see other people feeding on good things, anyhow; but when your lunch has been only a couple of liverwurst sandwiches and a soda—it's the limit."

She said this so lightly that her mother did not express any sympathy for her.

"I can fill the kettle and put it on the range myself," Mrs. Brown declared.

"You must do nothing of the kind," Adelaide warned. "Don't you go to fussing over that stove when Jennie's here to do it. The your sight gets better, stay away from it. That's what the doctor says. And you don't want to burn yourself That would be a bit too much for you to have to bear"

All traces of a smile faded from the young face when the parent had left the room.

Mr. Heyman's pianist had heard her sing this afternoon and had said that she might appear at the cabaret tonight. On her success or failure everything depended—her mother's operation, Jennie's chance to remain at school, the family food and rent.

Much at Stake

Alone now, Adelaide Brown drew from the back of her bureau drawer a small box of rouge and applied the pink paste to her pale cheeks. Then with a dark pencil she touched up her arched eyebrows. Miss Moran had warned her that she must "make up" if she would not appear ghastly tonight in the glare of the electric footlights on Solomon Heyman's platform

When she had thrown a length of cheap tulle about her neck, she surveyed herself in her little mirror. She certainly looked like a very different person from the young assistant at Madame O'Brien's millinery establishment.

As she entered the kitchen and her mother turned towards her, the daughter appreciated that, had the widow's eyesight been keener, she would not have allowed her child to leave the house "made up" as she was. She knew that her mother would say that she looked like a girl of the streets. This thought made the singer set her teeth grimly. No matter what she looked like, she must face what was ahead of her.

She shivered slightly as she reflected on what this might be. If she failed tonight, what would become of her mother and Jennie?

Already money was owing at the corner grocery, whose owner knew the family well enough to give them a week's credit. But it was two weeks now since his bill was paid.

The Smile Vanishes

She shook her head and set her teeth. She must not think of that dreadful "if" She must succeed.

"I am sure you look nice, my dear. I wish I could see you more plainly."

The words made the girl turn quickly. She had not heard her mother enter her room

Anecdotes of the Famous

An interesting picture is given by Mr. Arthur Warren in London Days of Madame Patti in her Welsh castle—of her unfailing good humor and kindness and thoughtfulness and self-giving she told Mr. Warren that it was that her voice was in perfect condition after so many years of use: "I have never tired it. I never sing when I am tired, and that means I am never tired when I sing. And I have never strained after high notes. I have heard that the first question asked of new vocalists nowadays is, 'How high can you sing?' But I have always thought that the least important matter in singing. One should sing only what one can sing with perfect ease."

Best Recipe Contest

Saddle of Venison

Use a saddle of about 10 pounds. Wash it carefully; leave no hairs on the outside; then cut salt pork strips 2 inches long, lard on both sides, place 2 rows on each side sugar, then in a large dripping pan put 3 slices of salt pork, 1 carrot, 1 small onion, 2 cloves, 2 peppercorns, 2 allspice, ½ a lemon sliced. Now place the saddle in the pan, season with salt and pepper and dredge with flour; then add 1 quart of good stock; boiling hot, with a small piece of butter. Place in a hot oven and baste every 10 minutes for 1 hour and 20 minutes; that will cook it rare. For the sauce: After taking out the saddle add 1½ pints of good stock and strain into a saucepan, then add 1 glass of currant jelly, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice and 3 white hearts of celery shredded fine and thicken with 1 teaspoon of cornstarch, and serve with the saddle; and serve potato balls and cauliflower with this dish.

Boiled Fish

Take one three or four pound haddock. Leave it whole after cleaning it. Put it into enough water to cover it. Add three small onions, two bay leaves, six cloves and a teaspoonful of salt. Boil twenty minutes. In the meantime fry up a pan of onions until well browned. Then take 1½ cups of the water in which the fish is boiled and pour into the onions while still on the fire. Place fish on platter and pour all the onions over it. Serve hot with mashed or boiled potatoes.

Hints for the Household

When making fruit pies, it will have been noticed that the juice from the fruit very often soaks through the undercrust and spoils the appearance of the pies. This can be prevented by brushing the undercrust over with the white of an egg

* * *

Fish should never be in the least undercooked. When boiling it allow sufficient hot water to cover and a dessertspoonful of vinegar to each quart of water. After the water had been brought to the boil, skim it well and allow the fish to cook slowly until it leaves the bones quite easily.

BARRIERS BROKEN

A STORY OF A FATHER AND MOTHER

By Edward Baughman.

IF anyone had ever hinted that there was a cloud on the horizon of the Camerons' married life to mar their domestic tranquillity they would have been ridiculed But there was definitely more than a cloud—the sky was black

Alice Cameron sat looking into space. There was no use denying it she told herself a dozen times, love between them—if there really ever had been any love—was dead.

Up to this morning they had kept up the pretense—since the morning he had gone to the office without kissing her; the first time in three years! The neglect was unnatural, though; she had been indifferent at his departure.

She smiled a rather bitter little smile There were not she had been heralded as making a brilliant match, when she married John Cameron, self-made man. But almost before the honeymoon ended she began to have misgivings. Then slowly, day by day, she began to see her ideal man fade.

There was only one way out—she had resolved that—divorce. Not very pretty sounding, but a cure for all marital ills

Startled out of her bitter reverie by childish prattle and the patter of tiny feet, she turned.

"Mamma up! Mamma up!" two-year-old Caroline cried impatiently, trying to climb into her lap

Divorce—no! Here was a barrier! For the sake of her child she would have to keep up the hollow mockery

In his office John Cameron sank dejectedly into his chair. It had come at last—the open breach He had been fearful from the first of the outcome. It was a mistake ever to think of living up to Alice Manning—he, a common, ordinary fellow from common, ordinary parents—parents of the working class—ever to aspire to the hand of a girl brought up in wealth and luxury.

Her very culture was a menace to their happiness There was no use of keeping up the sham of marital relations as so many mismated couples did He detested hypocrisy, hypocrites, because they trembled before public opinion. Divorce was the only remedy. Alice and he had nothing in common—absolutely nothing

Then, with a sudden start, he remembered—Caroline.

Divorce—no! For her sake he would have to live a lie. The very thing he detested in others. With an air of resignation, he turned to his work.

"Black diphtheria."

White-faced and blue-lipped, Alice Cameron turned from the doctor's to her husband with a cry. "My child, my child, it will kill him," she thought—strange—thinking not of herself first, but of him

John Cameron felt as though someone had suddenly clutched his heart in a strong grip.

"My God, doctor, not that!" he exclaimed. But he wasn't thinking of himself. He turned to Alice and helped her to a chair. "If she dies," he thought, "it will break her heart."

They were kneeling by the child's bedside when the crisis came. The feverish tossing of their loved one suddenly ceased and their hearts all but stopped. Then they heard the doctor's voice as though miles away: "The crisis is past. She is sleeping."

John Cameron's hand groped over the coverlet. Half way it was met by his wife's. With professional authority, the doctor gently forced them from the room

Standing face to face facing each other for what might have been an eternity for all conception they knew of time, they silently fell into arms opened to her. With a cry of joy she sprang into them and their lips met in a kiss of complete understanding

A Bitter Blow

A mother was reproving her little six-year-old girl for being naughty.

"If you are so tiresome and disagreeable," she said, "you will not be loved, and when you grow up you will not have any friends."

The child replied at once:

"I shall not want any friends, for I shall get married"

"Oh, no," replied mother, "you will not get married if you are disagreeable, for gentlemen are particular."

After a short pause, the little girl remarked

"Well, mummy, I don't think daddy was particular!"

A Martyr of Science.

Two powerful stevedores, who had some sort of quarrel, were engaged in unloading a vessel.

Uncomplimentary remarks and warnings of intended violence were exchanged whenever the two passed each other with their trucks.

"You just keep on pestlcatin' around wid me," declared one of the men, "an you is gwine to be able to settle a mighty big question for de scientific folks."

"What question dat?" asked the other.

"Kin de dead speak"

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Talking about millionaires who have gone stone-broke and have come back? Here's one!

"Borax" Smith, known all over America as the creator of the borax business, for some reason or other got it into his head that he would like to make Oakland, Cal., the metropolis of the Pacific coast. He began spending enormous sums and continued spending enormous sums. He spent so much that he went bankrupt. He lost control of the borax industry, a British syndicate getting hold of it. At eighty-"Borax" Smith was, so to speak, no longer "Borax" Smith. He was no longer a millionaire. Nor had he youth on his side.

That was in 1914, seven years ago.

* * *

Now, in his seventy-third year, an age when most men step out of the running, Smith has re-entered the arena determined to rebuild his fortune. Has regained control of his previous fortune-maker, borax.

The story of how this has been possible is quite romantic. Early in January a couple of penniless prospectors invaded a wild region of Nevada, said never to have been explored by any white man. They struck a deposit of colemanite, the raw material from which all our borax is produced. They knew the way to "Borax" Smith, and told him of their discovery. His investigation convinced him that borax could yeh ought to prove the largest in the world and he smelt a bargain with the prospectors. But he had remembered delighted to clean up a quarter of a million dollars. Had they held out for twice as much, they easily would have got it.

When "Borax" Smith first sprang into fame nearly thirty years ago, it was by hauling borax out of almost inaccessible and inhospitable Death Valley by his twenty mule team. This time mule teams have given place to a fleet of automobile trucks. The colemanite is taken from California to Nevada, over the railroad and shipped to Searles Lake, Cal., where Smith has established refineries.

Good luck to him!

Hotel and restaurant men in New York are complaining that business is poor. The building of too many huge new establishments is chiefly blamed, although it is also argued that fewer visitors from out of town are visiting the metropolis and that New York's own population is spending more freely. Theatre managers tell the same story.

Veterans who had attended university together where holding a class reunion. Not many of them were left. They constituted a chance to have a merry, reminiscent banquet. Then speeches were in order.

One of the classmates left the floor to take place as a judge. He had attained fame as a speechmaker. When his turn came to speak his chums sat back expecting a real treat.

The aged judge stood up, looked at first one of his old classmates and then another. His eyes began to moisten. It was manifest that he was having difficulty in finding words to speak. Finally he opened his mouth.

"Can't it be——, boys, to be growing old."

He fairly bellowed and sank down overcome with emotion.

A novel recipe for keeping young was given this week by another college student who is celebrating his seventy-seventh birthday.

In a message flashed to his company's 19,000 employes in all parts of the world, the advice given was this:

"Keep young by associating with young things. The newspapers are the youngest—born every day."

The sender of this message graduated from college fifty-five years ago. He is John H. Patterson, who, as chairman of the board of directors, still actively directs the policies of the National Cash Register company, which he founded half a century ago.

Wall Street has never before known, veterans declare, such phenomenal activity in bonds as has been experienced during recent months. The amount of money made by numbers of investment firms bringing out new issues and dealing in these issues has been extraordinary. The real profits in the bond business come, not from the $1.50 to $2.00 commissions on selling or selling bonds on the stock exchange but from distributing new issues and from trading in the large and inactive bonds. There has been tremendous activity in both these directions.

One house, a reorganization of an old-fashioned, highly conservative banking firm, and now headed by a man who has a reputation of being about the ablest of them all in his line, is said to have made literally millions of dollars this year. When ordinarily difficult financing has to be licked into shape, the first man thought of, it is now commonly remarked, naturally is the head of this dynamic house.

Curiously enough, another house that is abnormally active in bonds that also had a new alignment of its personnel not so long ago, also is said to be due largely to the use of outstanding brains and energy.

Stocks Close Weak in New York; Trading Active; Sterling Starts With Gain

RAILS ADVANCE WHEN OILS RECEDE

Coppers Are Heavy, Steels Down and the General List Rules a Little Lower

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at the close but got above their lowest level. Rails remained strong, but failed to retain all advances. Trading was active for a Saturday session and of fair breadth.

Almost losses to recede the most were Crucible, American Sugar, General Electric, National Lead and Railway Steel Spring. They were off a point or more. Mexican Petroleum was down a fraction at the low.

Strongest issues included Reading, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Baltimore & Ohio, Kansas, Colorado & Southern, Missouri Pacific, Players, Pullman, Producing & Refining and Royal Dutch. Oils rallied in the second hour.

The New York bank statement showed a gain of more than $18,700,000 in surplus reserve.

IRREGULAR AT START.

The price movement was mixed when the market opened, gains and losses about balancing. But a recessional began at once in which oils took the lead and were followed by the coppers, rails generally and the motion pictures. They advanced under the leadership of Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, which sold up 2 points. It is rumored that the directors of this road meet on December 29 they will declare an extra dividend of $5 a share. Atchison sold at a new high since 1917, within a few minutes. May Department Stores sold at a new high on its first transaction, but soon lost all of a point gain and a point beside. There was profit-taking in coppers and in some other issues. The former were firm at the outset. Fluctuations ruled narrow. Small changes were sufficient to wipe out gains and establish losses. By mid-morning the market was weak, barring rarities and a few issues, including Royal Dutch and some specialties.

CRUDE OIL GOING UP

The greater strength of petroleum shares has been due to a great extent to trade belief that the price of crude oil will soon go up. A like view regarding copper has enhanced the valuation of many metal stocks. But consumers are holding off as much as possible and a higher price for this commodity will keep buyers on a hand-to-mouth basis. There was no enlivening feature to the stock market and nothing to indicate that the business was to effect the usual week-end settlement by professional traders. Sentiment was bullish, in the main and would be generally of that nature but for lack of activity in lines of trade. No alteration in the money situation is expected until after the advent of the year. Large settlements this week occasioned no noticeable strain. It is expected that the government will borrow a quarter or half a billion dollars as the result of income taxes and excess profit obligations due on December 15.

BOSTON PRICES EASED OFF BEFORE NOON

The Boston market was irregular at the opening, but weakened during the morning, and most stocks were down at the close. Coppers were heavy, reflecting profit taking. Lowe's Theatres sold at a new low as the result of the omission of the common dividend. It dropped a point. Boston Sugar also declined, slumped four. Point or more losses were sustained by Alpine, Mohawk, Osceola, Alloues, St. Mary's Lake, Warren Brothers first preferred. All runs Studebaker, which made a new high volume for a Saturday session, but trading was confined to coppers, Nipissing, Shannon and Utah and a few other issues. It had no feature.

CURB TREND MIXED.

The Curb market was irregular. Gains and losses were close. Houston rose 3 cents at 20 cents, Boston and Montana 1 cent at 3 cents, Cosden Oil 1 cent at 14 cents and Chief "4" at 7 cents. Among declines were Crystal 1 cent at 9 cents, Dunlop 1 cent at 19 cents, Autostal 4 cents at 41 cents, Southern States 2 cents at 17 cents, Verde Mines 1 cent at 23 and Bagdad 1 cent at 44 cents.

BEGIN ROUNDUP OF STRAY DOGS IN LYNN

Seven Victims of Animal Shot Tuesday. Taking Pasteur Treatment

The seven persons bitten on Tuesday by a mad dog in Lynn began taking the Pasteur treatment today at the Lynn Hospital. At the same time, Lynn officials began a roundup of stray and unlicensed dogs, following the report of Dr. T. A. Parker, city veterinarian, that hydrophobia was epidemic among dogs in Lynn and Swampscott.

Mrs. Martina A. Rafuse, who heroically grappled with the mad dog, seizing him with her bare hands, is one of those taking the Pasteur treatment. The others are: Lieutenant Henry S. Avery of the fire department, John Andrew, William Barron, Charles Clements, Stephen Boland and Mrs. Sarah Farmer.

Officer Thomas A. Joyce has started a crusade against all stray dogs in Lynn. He says there are more dogs without licenses in the city than with. During the year 1,562 licenses have been issued, and Joyce's estimate of the stray dogs has, therefore, aroused the authorities.

Joyce has killed more than 600 stray dogs this year. Three mad dogs have been shot within a month.

The mad dog killed Tuesday was seen snapping at several dogs in the vicinity of New Park street, and dog owners in that neighborhood have been warned to watch for symptoms of rabies in their pets. Lynn authorities today cautioned all persons, and particularly children, to keep away from strange dogs until the hydrophobia crusade had been completed.

Health Commissioner M. R. Donovan said today that those who had been bitten through their clothing were in little danger of serious results, but that those who had been bitten on the hand or face would have to be watched more carefully at the hospital.

BRITAIN FLAYED BY FRIENDS OF INDIA

Conceived Arms Parley to Save Patched-Up Empire, Says Ghose

Charges that the world disarmament conference at Washington was conceived by Great Britain and furthered by its diplomats to save a patched-up empire were made by Sailendra Nath Ghose, militant manager of the Friends of Freedom for India, at a mass meeting held last night at Huntington Chambers, No. 39 Huntington avenue, to further India's struggle for liberty and the establishment of a republic.

Mr. Ghose is a national director of the American Commission to Promote Swaraj, and has been closely watching the Washington conference.

SAYS ENGLAND BANKRUPT.

The speaker declared England is a bankrupt nation today and that America has given a new lease of life to England by its agreement for a ten-year naval holiday, thereby giving Great Britain time to assimilate the new possessions it grabbed as a result of the World War. He said if the treaty is adopted by the United States it will make it so much harder for India to obtain its freedom.

Mr. Ghose predicted an open revolution, with massed Indian armies in the field, to take place the latter part of this month. He said England realizes it, but has been unable to stop the preparations for open warfare.

He sounded a warning to Americans to the proposed four-power alliance with the prediction that China, India, Germany and Central Europe will eventually form an alliance of their own if the defensive purposes fail to prevent the "Big Four" from completely domineering the rest of the world.

PREDICTS NEW WAR.

"The new alliance will bring about a state of war such as the world has never seen, and which will constantly mean the end of civilization," Mr. Ghose said.

It was a cosmopolitan gathering that heard the Indians make their appeal for liberty, independence and preservation of their birthright. The many nationalities represented there governed the purposes of the speakers driven home by the galaxy of speakers, themselves representative of the new America.

Michael A. Hastings presided. Miss Monica Foley, sister of Joe Foley, the cartoonist, and Miss Kay Gayadeen, secretary of the Boston branch, Friends for Freedom for India, sat on the dais with Dr. Holloway, were included in the list of celebrities.

Miss Foley combined Ireland's fight for freedom, and India's present struggle for independence, with the underlying principles that created the United States of America.

Speaking of America's ideals, or present lack of them, as she described it, she declared that the conference has done nothing for America. "Just as surely as we repudiated the Wilson principles will we repudiate Mr. Harding and his administration," she said.

ATTACKS LODGE.

Miss Foley attacked Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, saying:

"You won't see this in the newspapers or on the bulletin boards, but tomorrow there begins a silent campaign against Senator Henry Cabot Lodge's stand during the next two weeks on the four-power treaty. I protest the decision in the minds of the Massachusetts electorate whether or not he will be repudiated next year at the polls."

The Rev. John X. Regan, who has observed conditions in Europe, spoke in India's behalf and then related some of the scenes he had witnessed in Ireland. He declared that the conference has done nothing for America. "Just as surely as we repudiated the Wilson principles will we also repudiate Mr. Harding and his administration," he said.

SWIG ATTACKS ACTION OF ALLEN

Simon Swig, president of the Tremont Plan, Inc., has sent the Boston American the following letter:

"Editor of the Boston American:

"I urged the commissioner of banks to pay a dividend to depositors of the Tremont Trust Company. He did not. I went to court to compel him to pay a 5 per cent dividend. I wanted the people to have their first dividend by Xmas.

"He opposed my petition before Judge Jenney. His opposition stopped an order for a dividend. He is bonded and will pay a dividend when he is ready.

"He did not like the idea of paying a dividend on my petition. He says he will pay one on his own petition. I do not care on whose petition a dividend is paid, so long as one is paid.

"I did not get an immediate dividend for the depositors, but I believe my efforts will get them a dividend within two weeks, and possibly one week.

"Meanwhile may I suggest that the savings depositors withdraw their love or lend money from loan sharks, as they will have a dividend within a short time; and I believe there will still be 100 cents on the dollar for them, even after the banker crowd stop feasting on the Tremont Trust Company.
